Today's Cattle Industry

By Sammy Blossom
Executive Vice President
Mississippi Cattlemen's Association

Mississippi's cattle industry is strong and diverse with 17,000 cattlemen caring for over 900,000 head. Cattle are grown in all 82 counties, on operations ranging from small-acreage farms to stocker and cow/calf herds numbering in the thousands.

Primarily centered in the southwestern counties, the state's dairy herd is significantly smaller since Hurricane Katrina forced many producers out of business. Despite this and other challenges, our dairy industry is a large economic engine in the counties where milk is produced.

Pastured on land not suitable for crop production, cattle convert grass and by-products from other industries into the world's best – and tastiest – protein. While caring for their herd, cattlemen also provide habitat for our abundant wildlife and are caring stewards of the land and water.

Through our self-help program, the Beef Checkoff, great strides have been made in building demand for beef and defending our right to produce it. Research has discovered new cuts, developed innovative convenience products and proven beef's value in a healthy diet. Improved genetics and management practices have reduced beef's carbon footprint while providing a safe, healthy and abundant source of protein for this country and the world.

While cattlemen are enjoying good prices for their animals, ever-increasing costs and weather challenges have slowed the growth of the nation's cow herd. Other obstacles, like overreaching government regulation and threats from anti-agriculture groups, have made organizations like the Mississippi Cattlemen's Association important in protecting producer's rights to farm and care for their animals.

For 66 years, the association has worked for its members in Jackson and Washington to advance and defend their issues. In partnership with county cattlemen's associations and Mississippi State University, educational programs have served to improve farmers and ranchers management skills.

Youth programs have always been an emphasis of association activities, supporting FFA and 4-H livestock projects. For 20 years, Mississippi Cattlemen's Association (MCA) has sponsored one of the nation's largest junior cattlemen's association – helping provide leadership activities, educational programs and almost a half million dollars in scholarships.

We invite anyone interested in the cattle business to join our association and help carry on the work of MCA.

Fuel Your Family's Healthy Lifestyle With Beef

By National Cattlemen's
Beef Association

Nothing satisfies your family's hunger – and nutritional needs – like beef. Packed with ten essential nutrients, beef helps fuel healthy and active lifestyles at all life stages. High-quality proteins, like lean beef, provide the right amounts of essential amino acids, or “building blocks,” the body needs to function properly. And with the wide variety of lean and affordable cuts of beef, you and your family can feel good about enjoying beef as often as you like.

Beef is a power pack of nutrients that benefits people of all ages in maintaining both day-to-day and long-term health. A 3 oz. serving of beef is an excellent source of protein and a good source of iron, zinc, niacin, vitamin B6 and vitamin B12, while contributing less than 10% of the calories to a 2,000-calorie diet.

It's especially important that young children and older folks get sufficient protein. Children need the high-quality protein, iron and zinc in beef in order to develop their minds, as well as their bodies. Older adults can benefit from the protein in beef to help prevent loss of muscle mass and strength as they age.

Use Caution When Bringing In New Cattle

By Carla L. Huston, DVM, PhD, ACVPM
Department of Pathobiology
and Population Medicine
College of Veterinary Medicine
Mississippi State University

If you've travelled on any major Mississippi highway during the past few months, you have undoubtedly seen some of the many trucks loaded with hay headed west. What may not be so obvious is the large number of animals coming into the state from drought-plagued areas such as Texas and western Louisiana. Reports from the livestock markets indicate that we have seen larger numbers of breeding-age beef cattle entering the state as producers take advantage of herd liquidations and pasture availability.

Bringing in animals from outside sources, whether for breeding purposes or feeding purposes, poses the biggest risk to herd health. Recent concern nationwide has been that much of the livestock traveling interstate may not have the proper health requirements for travel. This month we will briefly discuss the importance of veterinary health inspections, as well as some of the major management practices that may be of concern when bringing in new animals.

Certificates of Veterinary Inspection

Certificates of veterinary inspection (CVI), also known as health certificates, are required by individual states prior to livestock entry. Each state writes and maintains its own import requirements. While the specific formats may vary, CVI's will require the signature of a veterinarian to certify that the animals listed appear to be healthy, to be free from disease, and meet requirements for entry at the time of inspection.

Animals will need to be properly identified, and the physical location of the destination (not just the city or a PO Box number) should be clearly specified. While a CVI does not guarantee freedom from all diseases or an animal's future health and productivity, it does ensure that the animal appeared healthy to the veterinarian at the time of inspection. Since federally accredited and/or licensed veterinarians must personally inspect animals to be listed on the certificate, it is an important tool in the prevention of livestock diseases.

Specific state requirements, such as age confirmation or disease testing verification, may be included on this document. Furthermore, some states will require an entry permit number prior to the animals given permission to enter the state. Most health certificates are good for a period of 30 days from issuance.

It is important to remember that the requirements of the state of destination, and not the state of origin, must be followed when animals are moved. A list of all states can be found at: http://www.aphis.usda.gov/import_export/animals/animal_import/animal_imports_states.shtml. If unsure, it is recommended that the veterinarian or producer contact the state ing states, requires that all imported non-virgin bulls, or bulls over 24 months of age, be accompanied by a negative Trichomoniasis test.

A bull that is brought into this state without being accompanied by a negative test for Trichomoniasis cannot be commingled with any cow unless it is tested and found to be negative for Trichomoniasis prior to commingling. Positive animals must go directly to slaughter.

Before purchasing or transporting cattle across state lines, be sure all veterinary inspection and health requirements are met.

animal health official prior to any interstate livestock movements.

According to the Mississippi State Code §69-15-3, livestock movements must occur under the supervision and in accordance with the rules and regulations of the Mississippi Board of Animal Health (MBAH). If required, a CVI will be on file at the MBAH for livestock imported from another state. When a CVI is issued in Mississippi, a copy of the certificate is to accompany the animal shipment. The original certificate is returned to the Mississippi Board of Animal Health, and an additional copy is mailed to the state of destination. The use of electronic health certificates is becoming more popular and is encouraged.

Breeding-age animals have specific import requirements for diseases such as Brucellosis, Tuberculosis, and Trichomoniasis. While surrounding states are free of Brucellosis and Tuberculosis, Trichomoniasis, a venereal disease that causes reproductive failure, is considered to be a growing concern in the southeast. Mississippi, along with several other neighbor-

Cattle Management

Cattle should be handled as gently and quietly as possible during transportation. Stress decreases an animal's immunity, making them more susceptible to disease, and can also interfere with an animal's ability to respond to vaccines. Recent studies looking at the effects of transportation have shown that distance travelled and location housed on the trailer may affect animal health.

Animals stressed from drought situations can be particularly susceptible to disease and may require additional attention. Malnourished cattle may need extra energy and protein supplementation to regain body condition and to maintain milk production and reproductive health.

New additions should ideally undergo a quarantine period from the rest of the herd for 4-6 weeks. They should be checked daily for signs of illness and disease. This will give the animals time to be acclimated and to be administered any vaccination or deworming products consistent with those of your resident herd. Make sure all animals in your herd are also properly vaccinated. Nose-to-nose contact should be avoided between quarantined animals and the rest of the herd, especially with highly susceptible animals such as baby calves and late pregnancy heifers.

In your daily routine, handle quarantined animals last to avoid carrying any potential diseases to the rest of the herd and use separate feeding equipment if possible. Wear clean boots and clothing, and disinfect all equipment that comes in contact with animals accordingly.

Along with purchased animals, cattle that leave the farm and return, whether it is for showing, breeding or other purposes, need to be treated as "new additions." When off-farm, your cattle get exposed to other animals, other pathogens, and other stressors. Therefore, not only can they carry diseases back home with them, but they are also going to be more susceptible to diseases themselves.

Biosecurity is extremely important when bringing in new animals. If you don't have one already, develop an overall biosecurity plan specific to your operation. Your biosecurity plan should include health and management practices for particular groups such as mature cows, calves, sick animals, and new additions, including both purchased animals and returning animals. In addition to some of the regulated diseases mentioned previously, diseases such as Johne's and bovine viral diarrhea (BVD) may be of concern to your operation when bringing in new animals.

It can prove to be a very costly practice to import cattle without the proper health requirements, not to mention risky to the overall health of your herd. In addition to performing the required veterinary inspections, your herd veterinarian can help you identify specific disease risks, prioritize the disease risks, and determine the most practical and effective biosecurity strategies to protect your cattle against disease from incoming cattle.

Additional information on livestock entry requirements, including Trichomoniasis regulations, can be found through your herd veterinarian or by contacting the MBAH at 601-359-1170 or online at <http://www.mbah.state.ms.us/regulations/index.html>.

Quilting, a Fun and Exciting New Hobby For Many

By Sandy Havard
Mississippi Ag & Forestry Museum

Everyone loves a beautiful quilt. Do you have one your grandmother or mother made for you?

Over the last fifteen years, quilting has become a fun and exciting new hobby. There are community quilt clubs and quilt guilds popping up everywhere throughout Mississippi. Plus, the Mississippi Quilt Association has over 450 members. Mississippi Quilters use 100% cotton fabric and they sew on the latest sewing machines designed just for quilters. Several new small quilting businesses have started and they will machine quilt your quilt with a long arm quilting machine.

Many quilt clubs and guilds participate in service projects by donating their finished quilts to local community charities.

Mississippi Quilters are grateful to the Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum for sponsoring the quilt exhibits for the last three years. Stop by the museum and view the Nine Patch Quilt Exhibit hanging until May 15, 2012.

The next quilt exhibit will feature the Legacy Quilt Exhibit, honoring Mississippi's Outstanding Quilters over 65 years of age. The purpose of this exhibit is to document a quilter's collection of quilts from everyday quilts to Sunday quilts. Please help us locate and recognize our state quilters for future generations to enjoy. Entries for the quilt exhibit are open to any resident of Mississippi. Ten Mississippi Quilters will be honored with each showing two of their quilts. The Legacy Quilt Exhibit will hang at the museum from June until October 2012 and is sponsored by the Mississippi Quilt Association. The deadline for entries is April 15, 2012.

Please nominate someone by using the nomination form at <http://www.mississippiquilt.org> or call Georgia Polk at 601-825-8105 or Joan Alliston at 601-825-4074.

Come enjoy a tour of the Agriculture and Forestry Museum and view the Nine Patch Quilt Exhibit.

The Mississippi Quilt Association and the staff of the Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum invite you and your family to view the Nine Patch Quilt Exhibit hanging through May 15, 2012. The beautiful quilt exhibit features nineteen quilters from across the state. Pictured from left to right are Joan Alliston, Quilt Exhibit Co-Chair; Sandy Havard, Museum Branch Director; and Georgia Polk, Quilt Exhibit Co-Chair.

Deadline To Apply For SBA Working Capital Disaster Loans In Mississippi Is February 24

By Michael Lampton
SBA Disaster Assistance

The U.S. Small Business Administration is reminding small businesses that February 24 is the filing deadline for federal economic injury disaster loans available in Alcorn, Benton, DeSoto, Marshall, Tippah, and Tishomingo counties in Mississippi. The SBA declared this area a disaster because of severe storms, tornadoes, straight-line winds, and flooding that began on April 23, 2011.

"These counties are eligible because they are contiguous to one or more primary counties in Tennessee. The Small Business Administration recognizes that disasters do not usually stop at county or state lines. For that reason, counties adjacent to primary counties named in the declaration are included," according to Frank Skaggs, director of SBA's Field Operations Center East.

"When the Secretary of Agriculture issues a disaster declaration to help farmers recover from damages and losses to crops, the Small Business Administration issues a declaration to eligible entities affected by the same disaster," added Skaggs.

Under this declaration, the SBA's Economic Injury Disaster Loan program is available to eligible farm-related and nonfarm-related entities that suffered financial losses as a direct result of this disaster. With the exception of aquaculture enterprises, SBA cannot provide disaster loans to agricultural producers, farmers, or ranchers.

The loan amount can be up to $2 million with a 4 percent interest rate for eligible small businesses and 3 percent for non-profit organizations with terms up to 30 years. The SBA determines eligibility based on the size of the applicant, type of activity and its financial resources. Loan amounts and terms are set by the SBA and are based on each applicant's financial condition. These working capital loans may be used to pay fixed debts, payroll, accounts payable, and other bills that could have been paid had the disaster not occurred. The loans are not intended to replace lost sales or profits.

Disaster loan information and application forms may be obtained by calling the SBA's Customer Service Center at 800-659-2955 (800-877-8339 for the deaf and hard-of-hearing) or by sending an email to disastercustomerservice@sba.gov. Loan applications can be downloaded from the SBA's website at www.sba.gov. Completed applications should be mailed to: U.S. Small Business Administration, Processing and Disbursement Center, 14925 Kingsport Road, Fort Worth, TX 76155.

Those affected by the disaster may also apply for loans electronically from SBA's website at <https://disasterloan.sba.gov/ela/>.

Completed loan applications must be returned to SBA no later than February 24, 2012.

Make Four Resolutions For Better Gardens In 2012

By Gary R. Bachman
MSU Horticulturist
Coastal Research
& Extension Center

In my job with Mississippi State University, I am asked a lot of questions about problems people have with plants and ideas they have for their landscapes and gardens.

Resolve to grow a new vegetable this year. If you like traditional zucchinis, try growing a new variety in 2012. As we begin the new year, here is my list of four resolutions to help make your landscape and garden more enjoyable and productive in 2012.

1- Get those pesky landscape and lawn weeds under control.

Believe it or not, the middle of winter may be the perfect opportunity to do this. Applying pre-emergent herbicides is an easy way to control many annual weeds that will start to germinate in our landscape and lawn early this spring. Always read and follow the label instructions.

Several different compounds will do the job. If you want to stay organic, corn gluten meal is an effective alternative to synthetics. If you are planning on doing any direct seeding of the garden or lawn, pay particular attention to application timing. Pre-emergent herbicides will also block the germination and growth of plants you may be starting in the garden from seed.

2 - If you are not already a member, join your local garden club to learn what everyone else is doing.

It's never too late to teach an old dog new tricks, especially in the garden and landscape. These clubs usually have guest speakers ranging from members with a particular expertise to local industry professionals. Gardeners are some of the most generous people you will ever meet.

Take the annual training and become a Master Gardener through the MSU Extension Service. You will get to know others with a mutual interest in learning, and you will meet many of MSU's specialists in entomology, plant pathology, weed and soil science, and horticulture.

The MSU Extension Service also provides other opportunities across the state for increasing your horticultural knowledge. Contact your local county Extension office for more information on regional workshops and learning events.

3 - Keep a photo journal of your garden and landscape.

With digital photography, this is not a difficult task, and sharing your accomplishments gets easier every day. Online services allow you to upload pictures and share a link to them with your friends. Or you can take the plunge and post pictures to your Facebook account, letting the whole world enjoy your garden.

4 - Grow a new vegetable this year, something you think you would not like in a million years.

One thing I've noticed about gardeners through the years -- and this includes me -- is that we all have certain ideas of what our vegetables should look like. Break that mold. I'm not saying you have to take a huge leap, but if you like zucchini, try a yellow zucchini like Butterstick or a round variety like Eightball. They have the same great zucchini taste, but very different appearances.
