By Haley Barrett
Mississippi Nursery
& Landscape Association

The 15th Annual Jackson Garden & Patio Show brought to you by the Mississippi Nursery & Landscape Association, Inc. is coming to the Mississippi Trade Mart March 16, 17, and 18. This year's event is sponsored by Miss 103, Entergy Mississippi, BankPlus, and Regions Bank.

In celebration of 15 Years of Mississippi Garden & Patio Shows, we are proud to announce that the admission price has been reduced to $5.00 per person! Children 12 and under are free, and as always, parking is free!

In addition to the new reduced admission rates, we are also excited about our extended shopping hours. This year, show times will be Friday 9-4, Saturday 9-5, and Sunday 11-4. This will give attendees plenty of time to purchase everything needed for their garden and patio areas.

At this year's show, attendees will get the opportunity to view several of Central Mississippi's finest landscapers' work in the Outdoor Living Spaces competition area. This year themes have been added to the competition – English Cottage or New Orleans Courtyard. These Outdoor Living Spaces will be in the middle of the exhibit hall and will serve as the focal point for this year's show.

For 2012, the special guest speakers are Nellie Neal, the 'Garden Mama', author, speaker, and radio personality; Catherine Hansen Strange, co-author of Fearless Entertaining and Fearless Entertaining Flowers; and Dr. Gary Bachman, host of MSU's Southern Gardening; plus many, many more. For a complete list of seminars, visit www.msnla.org. All seminars are free with admission.

The Jackson Garden & Patio Show is a family friendly show. Ball Seed Company and BWI Companies have teamed together to sponsor the Children's Activity Area. Children will be given an opportunity to learn how to plant a small flower and given instructions to care for it at home, along with other educational activities.

As always, the experts from Mississippi State University Extension Service will be there to answer any questions, provide information, and test soil for free.

While at the show, be sure to register for the fabulous door prizes donated from exhibitors and local businesses.

Of course the real stars of the show are the flowers! You'll find this year's Mississippi Medallion Award Winners, tropicals, ferns, trees, bedding plants, and tons of garden and outdoor accessories!

Watch for advertisements featuring a $5 off coupon, good on $50.00 purchases at any exhibitor's booth.

National Ag Day Celebration

By Jeff Wilson
Mississippi Soil & Water
Conservation Commission

American agriculture is responsible for providing the necessities of everyday life...food, fiber, clothing, and even fuel. That's the message of National Ag Day, which is celebrated March 8, 2012.

Producers, agricultural associations, corporations, universities, government agencies, and others from across Mississippi will gather to celebrate the abundance provided by agriculture at a special ceremony which will take place at the Mississippi Farmers Market at 11:30 a.m. on March 8, 2012.

The National Ag Day program is committed to increasing public awareness about American agriculture. As the world population soars, there is even greater demand for the food, fiber, and renewable resources that the United States produces.

The Agriculture Council of America, organizers of National Ag Day, believe that every American should understand how food, fiber, and renewable resource products are produced and should value the essential role of agriculture in maintaining a strong economy. They should appreciate the role agriculture plays in providing safe, abundant, and affordable products. National Ag Day will focus on educating Americans about the industry, so they may also acknowledge and consider career opportunities in the agriculture, food, fiber, and renewable resource industry.

Join this effort to promote American agriculture to everyone during National Ag Week, March 4-10, 2012. For more information contact the Mississippi Soil and Water Conservation Commission at (601) 354-7645 or jwilson@mswcc.state.ms.us.

Bulbs, Perennials, Lawns Are Preparing For Spring

By Bonnie Coblenz
MSU Ag Communications

Although most lawns and gardens look brown and dead through the winter, a lot of activity is taking place underground as plants prepare for the growing seasons.

Lelia Kelly, consumer horticulture specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said roots are continuing to grow and develop underground when the plants are dormant aboveground.

"That is why experts recommend fall planting for trees and bushes," Kelly said. "Roots have time to establish before spring when active top growth begins."

Since beds look dead in the winter, it can be easy to forget the life below and hurt this underground growth.

"You should avoid any digging or cultivation around plants that could damage the roots," Kelly said. "If you plan to work in your garden during the winter, mark where your bulbs and perennials are so you don't step on or uproot them."

If possible, gently work in a layer of organic matter such as compost, rotten sawdust, or peat moss around established plants. Adding organic matter will improve the structure and biological activity of the soil, according to Kelly.

While beds are still bare of spring growth, cut back old perennial foliage in preparation for new growth and remove leaves or other debris on the crowns of the perennials.

"Take advantage of any nice days to get outside and begin tidying up your landscape to make way for the emerging spring bulbs and flowering plants that will soon begin their spring show," Kelly said.

By mid-February, spring bulbs were blooming throughout the state, and bulb foliage had emerged and begun actively growing. When plants are just beginning to come up, even experienced gardeners can find it difficult to tell a weed from a desirable plant.

"Over time, gardeners can become familiar with the common weed seedlings, but novice gardeners can refer to weed identification guides that give pictures or drawings of common weed seedlings," Kelly said. "Another way to solve the problem is to cultivate a relationship with a more experienced gardener and invite that person over for a little help with weed and flower seedling identification."

Kelly said gardeners who find themselves responsible for a landscape that someone else planted should be patient through one full growing season to learn what has been planted and where the sunny, shady, wet, and dry places are in the landscape.

"Waiting and observing the landscape also can help the new homeowner determine where paths, seating areas, plant screens, or other landscape features are needed," Kelly said.

Wayne Wells, Extension turfgrass specialist, said lawns look brown and bare through the winter, but this is the perfect time to get work done on them. Wet winters are ideal for checking drainage problems.

"Take pictures of where water stands, and when it dries up, you can take care of those drainage problems," Wells said.

Remove any leaves remaining on lawns as these hold moisture, which attract insects and create ideal conditions for disease. Winter is also a good time to do a soil test.

"You should do a soil test of your lawn every three to four years," Wells said. "The local Extension agent can send the soil in to be tested at the Extension lab, and you will get back information on your soil pH and recommendations on how to improve it."

Lime takes several months to react fully with the soil, so Wells said winter months are a good time to apply lime if the soil test recommends it.

Clean and tune up lawnmowers and yard equipment in preparation for the heavy use of spring and summer. Late winter or early spring also is a great time for trapping any moles feeding in the lawn, Wells said.

Many weeds germinate in the fall, grow through the winter, and complete their life cycle in early spring, so the best time to get rid of them is while they are young and actively growing. It is also time to apply a pre-emergent herbicide to prevent summer annual weeds that will soon be germinating, he said.

Seek advice now from local garden centers, farm supply co-ops, and Extension offices for how to control weeds and improve lawns. The Extension Service offers the publication Weed Control Guidelines for Mississippi online: <http://msucare.com/pubs/publications/p1532.html>.

 8 ounces small elbow or other small pasta shape
 8 ounces Swiss chard (not red variety), washed & cut crosswise into thin strips
 8 ounces smoked turkey, chopped

Cook pasta in a large saucepan of boiling salted water until al dente, about 5 minutes; add chard during the last minute of cooking. Drain in a colander and rinse under cold water until cool. Press to remove excess water and transfer to a large bowl. Add turkey, black-eyed peas, onions and the reserved tomatoes. Whisk together the remaining ingredients in a small bowl. Whisk sour cream, vinegar, sugar, poppy seeds, salt and pepper in a large bowl until smooth. Reserve 1/4 cup of the dressing in a small bowl. Add the mixed greens to the large bowl and toss to coat. Divide among 4 plates and top with the chicken, melon, walnuts and feta. Drizzle each portion with 1 tablespoon of the reserved dressing.

Stripe Rust, Late Freeze Threaten State's Wheat

By Bonnie Coblenz
MSU Ag Communications

Wheat stripe rust was spotted in Mississippi and Arkansas in January, an unusual occurrence this early in the year made possible by the warm and wet winter.

These occurrences are the first reports of the disease east of the Rockies this year.

Tom Allen, Mississippi State University Extension plant pathologist at the Delta Research and Extension Center in Stoneville, said the rust was spotted January 27 in Arkansas and is more widespread there than in Mississippi. On January 30, a consultant spotted the first wheat stripe rust in Mississippi in Bolivar County, and on February 6 a second field of infected wheat was identified in Sunflower County.

"The field in Bolivar County has infected plants in a localized area along the southern edge of the field, so the affected area was quite small," said Allen, who also conducts research for the Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station. "The field in Sunflower County has much larger areas of affected plants. Stripe rust development is typically favored by temperatures between 50 and 65 degrees Fahrenheit, heavy dews, and intermittent showers, which create high humidity."

This winter's weather has created an ideal environment for stripe rust. The fungus that causes stripe rust blows in annually on wind currents from Central America and historically has been detected much later in the growing season.

"With the mild winter temperatures and the frequent rainfall, finding stripe rust is not unexpected," Allen said.

As of early February, specialists are suggesting no fungicide applications yet for wheat fields. Wheat is more susceptible to rust diseases in early growth stages and becomes more tolerant with age.

"Presently, it is important to determine the specific wheat variety planted in each field and determine that variety's resistance to stripe rust and other important yield-limiting diseases," Allen said. "If a particular variety is labeled as moderately resistant or resistant, monitoring for the disease will likely be more economical than simply making a fungicide application."

Rust diseases are a serious threat to wheat but are not normally treated during the crop's vegetative stages. The same conditions that promoted development of the disease also moved wheat out of its normal winter dormancy.

Erick Larson, Extension grain crops agronomist, said freeze damage is a bigger threat to the crop right now than the early appearance of stripe rust.

"Wheat needs to be dormant during the winter and then grow slowly through February. It should not really hit its stride and grow actively until early to mid-March," Larson said.

"The warm weather that we've experienced this winter has prompted wheat to begin growing much earlier than normal, which poses a serious threat for freeze damage later this spring, particularly if we have a hard freeze during March or early April," he said. "When wheat is still 4 to 6 inches tall, it is much more tolerant of freezing temperatures than it is at later growth stages, especially near heading."

Larson said the biggest concern now is that a late spring freeze would significantly diminish wheat yield. Later in the season, growers will have to make decisions on how best to manage stripe rust in their wheat fields.
