Improving Hay Production: Does Proper Fertilization Pay Off?

By Rocky Lemus, PhD
Extension Forage Specialist
Mississippi State University

As hay harvest season gets underway, thinking about fertilizing those stands should be a priority due to cost of fertilizer. Over 70% of hay producers in Mississippi do not soil test and less than 50% of the fields have an optimum pH (>6.0 and <7.0). Most soils have a pH ranging from 5.2 to 5.8. Do not neglect the soil pH, since it could affect soil tilth, root development, and create nutrient imbalances. Low pH can affect fertilizer use efficiency and reduce Nitrogen (N) uptake by 30-35%, Phosphorus (P) by 45-50%, and Potassium (K) by 10-15%. This translates into an economic loss of fertilizer dollars. However, many producers do not soil test and fertilize their soils regularly to avoid this expense.

Lime is a key ingredient to improving soil fertility. Since water is required for lime to react with the soil, effects of a lime application will be slower in a dry soil. It often takes six months to a year before a response can be measured even under perfect conditions. However, a response may be observed within weeks of the application when soil pH is extremely low.

It is important to apply lime immediately after the growing season or crop removal to allow lime to react, correcting soil pH before the next growing season. Even though it is best to incorporate lime whenever possible, it is still important to surface-apply lime to correct the soil acidity problem in established pasture and hay fields. It has been documented that correcting pH in the top two to three inches of the soil has a positive effect on forage production. The reactivity time also depends on the type of lime used.

Hay fields and pastures should be treated differently in terms of when to apply fertilizers, especially N, even when soil test results are the same. To make hay, there is the need for good nutrition to maximize the productivity and quality of the final product. There are three major nutrients that have an impact on hay production and constitute a real cost to hay producers: P, K, and N.

In the spring, P is a crucial nutrient in promoting the development of new roots and tillering. Phospho-rous could be applied to a hay field at any time of the year since it is very stable and available to the plant when needed. That is not the case when applying P to annual crops; it should be applied before planting. The flexibility of application times could benefit producers in obtaining P during the off-peak season when prices and application rates might be lower.

limiting element in hay production. Nitrogen is a major nutrient involved in chlorophyll development for photosynthetic activities, yield production, and forage quality (crude protein). Nitrogen, however, requires some timing and proper manipulations to get good yields and reduce losses.

Bermudagrass hay production requires 150 to 200 lbs. N per acre.

If P levels are low, it could affect hay production and allow only 40 to 60% of the total hay production. The development of a good root system will allow extracting nutrients from restricted areas and increase nutrient uptake. Depending on the soil type, hay removes from 8 to 16 lbs. of P per ton of hay produced per acre.

Potassium is a very important nutrient to allow plants to survive in cold weather and sustain productivity during drought stress. It is involved in many metabolic processes in the plant. Warm-season perennial crops could remove from 30 to 60 lbs. of K per ton of hay produced.

Nitrogen is usually the most

Splitting N applications will reduce the risk of leaching and volatilization losses as well as the risk for nitrate toxicity. The most efficient way to fertilize a hay field is to split-apply N based on the expected yield of the next growth. The actual rate should be 50 pounds N per ton of expected hay yield. Research has shown that splitting N applications can increase N use efficiency 25 to 35% and yields by 5 to 10%.

Fertilizer should be applied at least 3 days after cutting hay. Allowing the plants to recover and have some new green leaves will increase photosynthetic activity and will increase nutrient uptake. All the common N fertilizer products (ammonium nitrate, urea, urea ammonium sulfate, urea ammonium nitrate solution) work well. If urea or UAN are used, applying them right before rain will help to minimize N volatilization loss.

Manure such as poultry litter could also be an excellent choice for hay fields, especially with current high fertilizer prices if the producer has access to it. Be aware that if manure is used as the sole source of N for a hay crop, excess P and K will likely be applied over time. It is important to know that only 50% of the N might be available the first year of application.

Applying poultry litter between cuttings also provides other management strategies. This will reduce possible P runoff and K luxury consumption by the grass. This will also avoid storing and spreading the manure in the fall when manure nutrient use efficiency is generally lower because grasses such as bermudagrass and bahiagrass are going dormant.

Be careful not to apply too much manure. This will smother the hay and allow excessive moisture accumulation that could cause fungal diseases such as leaf spot disease. No more than 2 to 4 tons of manure per acre per year should be applied during the growing season. Apply as soon after harvest as practical to reduce potential injury to the regrowth. Test the poultry litter for nutrient content and follow regular soil testing (every year) to monitor for excess nutrients resulting from over fertilization with poultry litter.

Contact your local county Extension office for information regarding soil testing and proper fertilization.

CHOCOLATE PEAR & PECAN BREAD

Dry ingredients:

1 1/2 cups white whole wheat flour
1/2 cup organic sugar
1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons high quality cocoa
2/3 cup chopped pecans

Wet ingredients:

1 1/2 cups grated ripe peeled pears
1 large egg, lightly beaten
1/3 cup olive oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon fresh grated lemon zest
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice

Preheat oven to 350°. Lightly grease a 9x5 inch loaf pan. Combine dry ingredients in a bowl; whisk and set aside. In another large bowl, whisk the wet ingredients together to combine. Add the dry ingredients to the wet and mix until just combined. Add the pecans and mix briefly to distribute evenly; do not over mix. Spread the batter into the pan and bake at 350° for 45 minutes. Test for doneness being careful not to over bake as it may dry out the bread. Place pan on a wire rack to cool for 15 minutes. Remove bread from pan and return bread to rack to cool completely. The bread will moisten considerably overnight.

WHOLE WHEAT LINGUINE WITH WALNUT SAUCE

1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
4 large garlic cloves, thinly sliced
1/2 cup toasted hard whole wheat bread crumbs
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1/2 to 1 tablespoon hot red pepper flakes
1/2 cup roughly chopped Italian parsley
3/4 cup freshly grated pecorino Romano cheese
1 pound whole wheat linguine
2 tablespoons kosher salt

In a large skillet, heat the oil over a medium heat. Sauté the sliced garlic until light brown, about 2 minutes; do not allow it to burn. Add half of the bread crumbs, the walnuts, and pepper flakes and sauté allowing it to toast lightly. Remove from heat and set aside. Boil 6 quarts of water with 2 tablespoons of kosher salt. Cook the pasta according to the package instructions and your preference on the al dente scale. Remove 1/4 cup of the pasta water and add it to the skillet with the walnut mixture. Drain the pasta. Return the skillet to a medium heat, add the pasta and toss until well coated. Stir in the parsley and 1/2 cup of grated cheese. Transfer to a serving dish and sprinkle with the remaining bread crumbs and 1/4 cup of grated cheese.

HEALTHY PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES

Dry ingredients:

3/4 cup whole wheat flour
3/4 cup oats
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon (optional)

Moist ingredients:

1 cup smooth natural peanut butter
1/2 cup honey
1 egg
2 teaspoons vanilla
1/3 - 1/2 cups chocolate or carob chips

Combine dry ingredients; combine moist ingredients and mix two together. Cool in refrigerator for 20 minutes. Drop teaspoons of batter on a parchment-lined cookie sheet or baking sheet. Flatten cookies with a fork if desired. Bake at 375° for 8-12 minutes. Edges will be slightly browned, but be careful not to burn as honey browns fast.

TARRAGON SHRIMP COUSCOUS SALAD

1 pound large peeled shrimp
1 12-ounce package whole wheat couscous
Low sodium chicken broth (see recipe preparation for amount)
2 1/2 cups watercress, chopped
1/2 pound tomatoes, diced
2 green onions, finely chopped
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/3 cup olive oil
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1/2 teaspoon dried tarragon
Freshly ground black pepper, to taste
1 teaspoon kosher salt

Prepare the couscous according to the package directions, substituting chicken broth for the volume of water specified on the package. Set aside to cool at room temperature. In a small pan, heat the oil over a medium heat. Add the tarragon and garlic and sauté until the garlic becomes fragrant but does not quite brown. Remove from the heat and allow the oil to cool. Separate 1/4 cup of the oil for the dressing. Prepare the dressing by whisking together lemon juice, 1/4 cup tarragon oil, kosher salt, and freshly ground black pepper to taste. Skewer the shrimp and brush with the remaining tarragon oil. Dust the shrimp lightly with kosher salt and ground black pepper. In a large bowl, combine the couscous, watercress, green onions, tomatoes, and the dressing. Broil the shrimp for about 2-3 minutes per side. Serve the shrimp over the couscous.

Warm Spring Gave Corn An Early Start

By Bonnie Coblentz
MSU Ag Communications

A warm spring made early corn planting possible, and despite frequent rains, the statewide crop was about 90 percent planted by mid-April.

Erick Larson, grain crops agronomist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said corn planting should be completed soon if rains don't halt progress.

"We had a few acres of corn planted in late February, but the bulk of the crop was planted between rains in March," Larson said. "The south and central Delta made good progress and have completed most of their corn planting, but the extreme northern part of the state has a substantial amount of planting yet to complete."

The last time most of the corn was planted and up by the first week of April was 2007.

"Unfortunately, an extremely hard freeze on Easter weekend, followed by a couple weeks of cold temperatures, damaged a lot of corn and wheat in northern Mississippi counties that year," Larson said. "We hope the weather will be more cooperative this season."

Extremely warm weather has prompted much faster corn development than normal.

Jerry Singleton, Extension agronomic crops agent in Leflore County, said plenty of sunshine and warm weather allowed 99 percent of the corn in this southern Delta county to be planted and up by early April.

"The corn developed a dark green color right out of the ground," Singleton said. "The cool weather we're having in mid-April may yellow it up a bit but will not set it back."

Larson said corn's extended planting window this year is causing some management challenges.

"Some growers farming large acreage are still planting corn and others have fields that already need to be side-dressed or have herbicides applied," Larson said. "Nitrogen and herbicide applications are normally not difficult to schedule because corn is usually planted in a shorter time period."

USDA predicted 900,000 acres of corn would be planted in Mississippi, up 11 percent from the 2011 crop. However, Larson said planted acreage probably will not be that high.

"Our intentions are being scaled back somewhat during the planting season, primarily because of the increase in fertilizer prices," he said. "Corn requires a lot of nitrogen fertilizer, and there's a lot of seed being returned to dealers because of nitrogen's high cost."

Corn acreage in northeast Mississippi has had a slower planting season because frequent rains have kept fields too wet for equipment.

"We experienced the same warm temperatures that the rest of the state did in March, but it's been extremely wet. That's been the delay," said Jay Phelps, Extension area agronomy agent who works in six counties from his base in Pontotoc County. Only about 20 percent of the corn crop in his area has been planted, but fields were dry enough to start planting again by mid-April.

"If it stays dry, it won't take but about a week to get it in," Phelps said. "We planted well into May last year."

National Rice Month Scholarship Contest

Gardeners Can Control, Prevent Vegetable Pests

By Keryn Page
MSU Ag Communications

Home vegetable gardeners have a better chance of success if they take steps to prevent or control common insect pests.

Dr. Blake Layton, an entomologist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said vegetable gardeners can avoid insect problems if they know what to look for and how to react.

"Fire ants are a problem in home gardens, damaging the vegetables themselves or sometimes the gardener with painful stings," Layton said. "In most cases, people can use a fire ant bait around the perimeter of the garden, where it is labeled for use, to greatly reduce the number of fire ants. Most fire ant baits are not labeled for use directly in the vegetable garden."

Layton said gardeners should put out bait at the beginning of April when they begin to till the garden for the year, and then again around the Fourth of July. But if gardeners missed the April application, they still can put the bait out in May or June.

Most tomato growers are familiar with the tomato hornworm, which can grow to over 3 inches long and eats mainly the foliage of tomato plants. However, the tomato fruitworm can really disappoint growers. This pest feeds directly on the fruit and is smaller than the hornworm.

"If you don't control these when you need to, you'll go out and pick what look like perfectly ripe tomatoes and find they have holes in them and that they're not suitable for eating," Layton said.

To keep the tomato fruitworm under control, use a foliar spray with an appropriate insecticide after tomatoes begin to bloom. The spray should include either carbaryl or a permethrin product.

The best way to avoid losses from the squash vine borer is to plant as early as possible in hopes of producing some squash before the pests become established. Some insecticides are also available to protect late-planted squash.

The cow pea curculio is another common insect pest in Mississippi vegetable gardens. Layton said what appear to be little specks on the shelled peas are actually cow pea curculio eggs or grubs developing inside the pea.

"My mother and grandmother taught me to pick those out," Layton said. "But if you don't want to do that, the key is timing. As soon as you see your first little pea pods about a half-inch long, spray them three times, five days apart, with carbaryl."

Stink bugs pose a problem to gardeners, mainly later in the growing season. Layton said several insecticides can control stink bugs, especially on peas and tomatoes where they cause the most problems. Spraying plants with a water hose can knock off small insects, but gardeners probably will have to repeat this process daily.

Companion planting can have a repellent effect on certain insects. Marigolds tend to repel beetles and some other insects. Strong-smelling plants like onions, chives, basil and thyme can help keep insects out of a garden.

The Extension publication Insect Pests of the Home Vegetable Garden provides detailed information on insecticides, control methods, and organic gardening. Contact your local Extension office for copies of these publications, or visit <http://www.msucare.com/pubs>.
