New Cottage Food Law Creates Opportunities For Farmers Markets

By Paige Manning
Director of Marketing
and Public Relations - MDAC

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) recently launched the Know Your Food, Know Your Farmer campaign. Many across the nation are taking this to heart and wanting to know more about where their food comes from and the production practices used in growing it. One way of getting to know your food and the farmer responsible for growing it is by shopping at a local farmers market. By purchasing direct from a farmer, we as consumers have the opportunity to get to know the person that worked hard to produce the food that we not only eat ourselves but that we also prepare for our families.

These markets provide farmers with a marketing opportunity that will allow them to receive a retail price for their products, while, in turn, increasing consumers' access to fresh, nutritious fruits and vegetables.

Farmers markets are booming across the nation, and Mississippi is no exception. In fact, Mississippi has experienced an even greater increase in the number of markets percentage-wise than that of the nation as a whole over that past few years. In 2006, the USDA reported 4,385 farmers markets nationwide with 23 of these being located in Mississippi. By 2012, that number had risen to 7,864 nationally, a 79 increase, while the number of markets in Mississippi increased to 75, a 226 percent increase. It is expected that Mississippi will have close to 80 markets operating in 2013.

As Mississippians make their way to their local markets this summer to find the fresh fruits and vegetables they have been craving all winter, they may notice an increase in the availability of baked goods and other specialty foods. This is primarily due to a recently passed law - Senate Bill 2553, commonly referred to as the Cottage Food Bill. This bill exempts cottage food operations from permitting requirements of the Mississippi State Department of Health. As a result of this new law, certain food items that are prepared in private home kitchens can now be sold to the public.

The elimination of permit requirements will make it easier for those producing specialty foods to do so from a cost standpoint. For instance, this will make it more feasible for farmers who may have an overabundance of a crop such as blueberries to use them to make value-added products such as jams and jellies that they can sell. In the past, it was often cost-prohibitive for farmers to turn their produce into value-added foods if they felt the volume of expected sales would not cover the cost of constructing and maintaining a commercial kitchen separate from their home kitchen.

In order for a food item to be considered a cottage food and be exempt from permitting requirements, it must be a non-potentially hazardous food meaning that it does not require time and/or temperature controls for safety. This includes, but is not limited to, items such as baked goods (cookies, breads, pastries, pies, cakes) without cream, custard, or meat fillings; certain jams, jellies, and preserves; dry baking mixes; dried spices; and certain acidified foods. In order to determine if a specific food item qualifies as a cottage food, processors should contact the Mississippi State Department of Health at 601-576-7689.

For those that may be interested in processing and selling cottage food products to the public, there are certain labeling requirements which must be met. Labels must contain the following information:

- The name and address of the cottage food operation.
- The name of the cottage food product.
- The ingredients of the cottage food product, in descending order of predominance by weight.
- The net weight or net volume of the cottage food product.

(e) Allergen information as specified by federal labeling requirements.

(f) If any nutritional claim is made, appropriate nutritional information as specified by federal labeling requirements.

(g) The following statement printed in at least ten-point type in a color that provides a clear contrast to the background of the label: "Made in a cottage food operation that is not subject to Mississippi's food safety regulations."

Although cottage food operators are exempt from permitting requirements, they are still responsible for ensuring that products are safe for consumer consumption. Producers of cottage foods, while not required to participate in food safety training, are highly encouraged to do so especially when producing acidified or pickled products as improper acidification can lead to foodborne illnesses.

Cottage food sales are not just limited to farmers markets, but all sales must be directly from the producer to the end consumer. These items can not be sold over the Internet, by mail order, or at wholesale or retail establishments. Cottage foods can only be sold in the state of Mississippi. In order to be considered a cottage food operation, the operation's annual gross sales of cottage food products can not exceed $20,000.

Consider your local farmers market when purchasing fresh fruits and vegetables and specialty food items. Get to know your food and your farmer. To locate a farmers market in your area, visit the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce website: www.msfarmermarket.org.

What's in a Biscuit?

By Lise Foy, Director
MS Agriculture & Forestry Museum

Some people roll them out and cut the dough in perfect circles, some people mix them in a wooden bowl handed down from Grandmother and pat them out into balls, some people 'whop' the can on the counter, and others get theirs at the deli counter at the grocery. Regardless of where you get your biscuits, most Southern people eat them. Common toppings include honey, jelly, sausage, gravy, or simply a pat of butter. I even saw on one of the cooking shows not too long ago, a biscuit topped with ice cream. That cook was obviously not Southern.

I know we could have quite the debate about what kind of gravy or what flavor jelly is best, but for this conversation, the focus is the biscuit. Specifically, I mean the traditional Southern biscuit with soft crumbs, as opposed to the 'biscuit' you might find in Europe; what we would call a cookie south of the Mason-Dixon Line. Biscuits were a staple in the antebellum kitchen and still are today in many Mississippi kitchens. The ingredients are not expensive and usually on hand.

Biscuits have been in existence a long time and have evolved from a flat, hard, dry cake that kept well during travel and was typically reheated. The term 'bis' (twice) 'cuit' (cooked) is of French origin, and refers to the practice of putting the cakes back in the oven. These cakes were also referred to as 'stone bread'. Appetizing!

Many biscuit makers say the foremost concern in a good biscuit is the flour. Proper biscuits, according to our resident biscuit makers at the Ag Museum, are made with soft red winter wheat flour, low in protein and gluten. This variety of wheat, grown in the Mississippi Delta, accounts for around 19 percent of the U.S. wheat crop annually.

There are many variations on the rest of the ingredients in the feathery, light biscuits that originated in Southern plantation kitchens. Some recipes include salt, and others include sugar. Liquids added to biscuit flour may include buttermilk, heavy cream, flat beer, sour cream, or cola. Sometimes cream of tartar will make an appearance in a biscuit recipe, as well as baking soda.

Some research also says that the practice of beating air into the dough (up to 100 strokes, or more for company) makes a thinner and crispier biscuit if that is your preference. The DeMuth Improved Dough & Beaten Biscuit Machine on display in the Heritage Center Gallery, circa 1900, was donated by Mrs. M.K. Grantham of Jackson. Our files include the recipe that Mrs. Grantham's mother used with the machine that makes seven dozen party size biscuits.

The manner of baking biscuits has also come a long way over the course of history. Visitors can find three wood burning stoves on display at the Ag Museum, which would have been used to make many a biscuit in their time. One is located in the detached kitchen of the Fortenberry-Parkman Farmstead Main House, one in the Sharecropper exhibit, and one in the kitchen exhibit in the Heritage Center. While visitors can see that one of these antique appliances is more 'modern' than the other two, all of them required building a fire in one chamber that heated the other chamber used for baking.

My grandmother could make biscuits in a wood burning stove, and did so until she and my grandfather moved to town in the 1960s. I grew up at a table with piles of homemade biscuits my mother made for three hungry kids. Momma rolled and cut the dough and buttered each one right out of the oven. Shamefully, I admit my biscuits presently come from a Pillsbury bag in the freezer. You see, I like my biscuits light and fluffy, and my attempts at homemade ones always 'squat on the rise', if you catch my drift. As I prepare to bring the next generation into the world, (twin girls on the way in August) I will need to practice and develop my biscuit making skills so that the tradition of homemade biscuits for supper can live on.

According to an article published by the Wheat Foods Council, (www.wheatfoods.org), the most important thing is to make biscuits a lot. A biscuit recipe, after all, is not so much a series of instructions, but excellence developed by repetition. In the article, Kathleen Purvis of The Charlotte Observer states, "Most of biscuit success is in how gently you handle the dough, and that's just practice."

Advertising Guidelines

The Mississippi Market Bulletin is published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The Mississippi Market Bulletin is an important way for the Department to disseminate news and information about issues affecting Mississippi's agriculture industry and the Department's operations.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Frequent Rainfall Causes Historic Planting Delays

By Bonnie Coblenz
MSU Ag Communications

Poor weather has created so many rain delays that most of the nation's row crop planting is behind schedule, and Mississippi is even farther behind than other states.

"We're a month behind," said Ernie Flint, an area agronomist who has been with the Mississippi State University Extension Service for 22 years. "I've never seen anything that compares with this spring. I've seen the Delta planted late but never the whole state."

Before he came to MSU in 1991, Flint spent 18 years as a crop consultant, so he spoke from a long perspective in agriculture.

"It's far from time to panic. There's still time to get most crops in the ground before the absolute cutoff date," Flint said. "Our farmers run up to 18-row planters, and some are changing drivers and running around the clock. They don't like to do it, but the instrumentation and seed monitors they have make it possible for them to plant in the dark."

Grady Dixon, an associate professor of geosciences at MSU, said the state's abnormally cool and wet spring has broken some records.

"It has been unusually wet, both in the frequency, and intensity of rains. This has been coupled with cooler temperatures that result in less evaporation," Dixon said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported that these conditions allowed only four days suitable for fieldwork in Mississippi during the two-week period ending on May 12.

According to USDA's May 12 Crop Progress and Condition Report, with the exception of corn, Mississippi row crops are significantly behind schedule.

Corn was 91 percent planted, when typically it is 99 percent complete. By mid-May in the past five years, cotton has been 52 percent planted; rice, 86 percent; soybeans, 71 percent; peanuts 40 percent; sorghum, 66 percent; and watermelon, 93 percent. This year, however, cotton is only 7 percent planted; rice, 12 percent; soybeans, 17 percent; peanuts, 1 percent; sorghum 6 percent; and watermelons, 32 percent.

John Michael Riley, an Extension agricultural economist, said Mississippi is farther behind the rest of the country, which is also well behind normal planting progress.

"Mississippi is the second farthest behind with cotton planting and the farthest behind by quite a bit with rice planting," Riley said. "Similarly, Mississippi soybean planting is the farthest behind among major growing states."

Late-planted crops face greater insect and disease pressure, and they often reach peak water demand during the summer's hottest, and driest weather. Few financial tools exist to help growers limit the risks associated with late planting, and the crop insurance sign-up deadline has passed. Producers with crop insurance still have some time to get their crops in the ground.

"The final planting date for corn and sorghum has passed, but provisions exist to allow late planting of these crops," Riley said. "Final planting dates for other crops have not passed, and these crops remain insurable."

Brian Williams, an Extension agricultural economist, said markets have responded to planting progress in recent weeks.

"I think crop prices are currently supported at least in part by the slow progress. However, a few positive weather reports have caused sharp daily drops in prices on at least one occasion over the last week," Williams said.

Planting is progressing at the slowest pace since 1990, but Williams said producers are not too concerned yet.

"Usually a producer is able to get a crop planted, even if it is not the crop that was initially planned," he said. "We will likely see at least a few corn acres switched to soybeans this year because of the planting delays, but soybeans are much more forgiving of a late planting."

Lester Stephens, Extension agricultural agent in Washington County, said the Delta has experienced severely delayed planting in the past, but about three weeks of good weather should give growers the chance to catch up.

"If we have pretty weather, it won't take long to get it all planted," Stephens said. "Everybody is a little frustrated now, but we'll get it done."

Hyde-Smith Announces Cost-Share Program To Assist Fruit and Vegetable Growers

By Paige Manning
Director of Marketing
and Public Relations - MDAC

Commissioner Cindy Hyde-Smith announced that the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce is currently offering a cost-share program to provide financial assistance to Mississippi fruit and vegetable farmers receiving Good Agricultural Practices (GAP) and Good Handling Practices (GHP) Certification. Eligible farmers will receive reimbursement for 75 percent of the certification costs up to a maximum of $500. GAP/GHP audits are voluntary independent audits of produce suppliers throughout the production and supply chain. These audits focus on best agricultural practices to verify that fruits and vegetables are produced, packed, handled, and stored in the safest manner possible to minimize risks of microbial food safety hazards.

"Food safety is not only a concern of consumers; it is a priority of our growers as well. This program will assist our farmers in receiving certification to verify that they are taking the proper precautions throughout the entire crop production process to ensure that they are providing a safe food supply. This certification will create new marketing opportunities for our farmers allowing them to sell their products through avenues not available to them without certification," said Commissioner Cindy Hyde-Smith.

To receive reimbursement, farmers must submit a completed application with proper documentation of costs incurred. Only audits completed by an approved USDA certifier will be eligible for reimbursement. A list of auditor contacts is available at www.ams.usda.gov/gapghp. Funds are available on a first-come, first-serve basis until the funds are depleted. Funding for this program is provided through the USDA Specialty Crop Block Grant Program.

For more information about this program or to obtain an application, visit www.mdac.ms.gov, call Michael Lasseter at (601) 359-1120, or email michaell@mdac.ms.gov. Funds are available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Bonnie Plants Third Grade Cabbage Program

Holden Brown, a student at Sylva Bay Academy in Bay Springs, MS, recently won a $1000 scholarship from Bonnie Plants after growing a 15 pound cabbage. Holden participated in the Bonnie Plants Third Grade Cabbage Program and was selected as state winner of the program. The Bonnie Plants Company has sponsored over the past 11 years a third grade Cabbage Program to give students a rewarding opportunity to learn about vegetable gardening, nature, and healthy foods. Presenting the scholarship (left to right) are: Paige Manning, Director of Marketing and Public Relations with the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce; Holden Brown; and Susan Head, Marketing Specialist with the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce.
