Accurate Labeling of Catfish Is The Law

By The Catfish Institute

As seafood imports grow, mislabeling of seafood products in restaurants is becoming common. Studies by media and consumer organizations find that as much as 25 to 50 percent of seafood is mislabeled.

Accurate labeling of catfish and catfish-like species is required by law. The Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act defines "catfish" for marketing purposes as members of the taxonomic family ictaluridae, commonly known as channel catfish. Asian fish such as basa, tra, swai, and pangasius, on the other hand, are members of the taxonomic family pangasiidae. It is illegal to label them as "catfish" under federal law.

Additionally, Alabama, Arkansas,

Louisiana, Mississippi, and Tennessee have statutes requiring that the country of origin of catfish served in restaurants be clearly identified. Additionally, Florida and Kansas are among several states with laws regulating the accurate labeling of all seafood sold.

When it comes to catfish and catfish-like species, surveys find that 90 percent or more of consumers want to know what they are eating in restaurants -- and what country it comes from. The vast majority of consumers will choose U.S. Farm-Raised Catfish when given the opportunity. Many of today's restaurant patrons are looking for "farm to plate" foods like U. S. Farm-Raised Catfish.

Correctly labeling the species and country of origin of catfish and catfish-like products is also important to the safety of restaurant patrons. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) visually inspects less than two percent of imported seafood, and only two-tenths of one-percent is ever laboratory tested. Despite this tiny inspection and testing rate, the FDA consistently finds banned and potentially hazardous drugs and chemicals - including carcinogens - in fish imported from Asia. Recently, fish imported from Vietnam that was for sale in North Carolina was found to have a dangerous level of formaldehyde.

U. S. Farm-Raised Catfish is one of the nation's most highly regulated seafood products. It is safe, nutritious, and available year-round. For more information, visit UScatfish.com.

Farming Catfish

By The Catfish Institute

The Ponds

Ponds are built over clay-rich soils, where they are filled with pure freshwater pumped from underground wells. The rectangular-shaped ponds, averaging 10 to 20 acres each, are built above ground by constructing levees. These embankments contain water that can reach 4 to 6 feet in depth.

The Feeding

Besides the improved quality of the living conditions, a big difference between a U.S. Farm-Raised Catfish and its wild cousin is what they eat. These delicacies are fed a gourmet diet of puffed, high-protein food pellets, made of a mixture of soybeans, corn, wheat, vitamins, and minerals. Farm-raised catfish have learned to feed on pellets that float on top of the ponds, unlike its wild bottom-feeding cousin. This feed not only helps in producing a healthier fish, but also a cleaner, milder tasting one.

Farming

Farming begins with the selection and mating of quality brood stock. A brood fish will lay from 3,000 to 4,000 eggs per pound of body weight over an average of 12 years. Fertilized eggs are collected and placed in controlled hatchery tanks. After seven days at a temperature of 78° F, the eggs hatch. The young, called "sac fry," live off the food supplied by the yolk sacs.

When the yolk is used up, the fish begin to swim and are moved to a special pond where they grow into fingerlings. At 4 to 6 inches in length, they are transferred to catfish ponds in a ratio of approximately 4,500 per surface acre of water.

Harvesting

U.S. Farm-Raised Catfish are harvested in seines (large weighted nets) as seen in featured pictured at about 18 months old and averaging 1 to 1.5 pounds. They are loaded into baskets and then placed in aerated tank trucks for live shipment to processing plants.

Processing

The catfish are kept alive up until the minute they are processed. The entire processing procedure is completed in less than 30 minutes. The fish are cleaned, processed, and placed on ice or frozen to temperatures of 40° F below zero. Frozen farm-raised catfish are individually quick-frozen (IQF), a method which preserves the taste and quality of the fish.

There are 16 TCI-Certified Processing Plants with a combined processing capability of more than 10 million pounds of U.S. Farm-Raised Catfish per week, every week of the year. This ensures a steady supply of catfish at an affordable price. These plants are regularly inspected by the U.S. Department of Commerce (USDC) and are certified by the USDC as a "Sanitarily Inspected Fish Establishment." Recently, voluntary Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point (HACCP) guidelines have been set by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) which have been adapted by all TCI-affiliated catfish processors.

From Our Kitchen To Yours

Unique and Tasty Catfish Menu Ideas

*****

Classic Catfish Chowder

4 U.S. Farm-Raised catfish fillets, cut into bite-size pieces
6 slices thick-cut bacon
3 cups yellow onion, diced
1 1/2 cups celery diced
3/4 cup flour
2 tablespoons Old Bay seasoning
6 cups chicken stock
2 large baking potatoes, cut into bite-size pieces, boiled, and drained
1 15-ounce can whole kernel sweet corn, drained
1/4 cup fresh parsley, finely chopped
1 cup thinly sliced green onion, divided
1 cup heavy cream
1/2 teaspoon hot sauce
Salt and pepper to taste

In large stock pot over medium high heat, cook bacon until nicely browned. Remove bacon strips and set aside. Add onion and celery to pot, cook 5 minutes. In a small bowl, combine flour and Old Bay seasoning. Sprinkle flour mixture evenly over onion and celery, stirring to absorb all oil. Cook 3 more minutes. Add chicken stock; stir to combine vegetables. Stir in potatoes, corn, parsley and 3/4 cup of green onions; cook 5 minutes. Add the catfish; cook for 5 more minutes or until catfish is cooked through. Mix in cream, hot sauce, and salt and pepper to taste. Garnish with remaining green onions and diced bacon pieces. Serve with crusty bread.

Catfish BLT with Lemon Aioli

4 U.S. Farm-raised catfish fillets
3/4 cup yellow cornmeal
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
Vegetable oil
4 sandwich rolls
Butter or margarine
12 slices smoked bacon, cooked
Sliced tomato
Baby spinach leaves
Lemon Aioli:
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon chives, chopped
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon lemon zest
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Combine cornmeal, flour, salt, cayenne pepper, and garlic powder. Coat catfish with cornmeal mixture, shaking off any excess coating. Fill a large, heavy skillet half full with vegetable oil; heat to 350° F. Add catfish in a single layer and fry until golden brown, about 5 to 6 minutes, depending on size. Remove catfish and drain on paper towels. Spread butter on each side of rolls, and lightly brown in a large skillet. In a medium bowl combine lemon aioli ingredients until well blended. Smear toasted bread with lemon aioli; layer tomatoes, spinach, bacon and catfish on bread.

Spinach and Artichoke Dip with Catfish

3 U.S. Farm-Raised catfish fillets, baked and flaked
1 pound bag frozen chopped spinach, defrosted and drained
1 8.5-ounce can artichokes, drained
3/4 cup Parmesan cheese, grated and divided
1/2 cup green onions, diced
1 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons fresh garlic, chopped
1 teaspoon hot sauce
Salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350° F. Squeeze excess moisture out of spinach and artichokes. Combine 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese and all remaining ingredients in large bowl. Transfer to glass baking dish, sprinkle with remaining 1/4 cup cheese. Bake 40 minutes or until hot in the middle and golden brown. Serve warm with your favorite crackers.

Catfish with Spicy Cantaloupe Slices

4 U.S. Farm-Raised catfish fillets, 6 to 8 ounces each
2 tablespoons olive oil
Sea salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
Juice of half a lime
8 to 12 thin wedges ripe cantaloupe, seeded and peeled
2 tablespoons chopped fresh mint leaves
1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1 cup fresh blueberries, stems removed, or strawberries, hulled

Lightly oil the fish fillets and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Prepare a hot grill; when ready to grill, set oiled perforated grill rack over the fire. Place the fish on rack and grill until the fish is opaque and just beginning to flake when tested with a fork, 4 to 5 minutes per side, turning once halfway through the grilling time. Arrange the fillets on 4 serving plates. Fan 2 to 3 wedges of melon on each plate. Squeeze the juice of half a lime over the fish and melon. Sprinkle with the mint leaves, red pepper flakes, and blueberries or strawberries.

Thoughts on the 'Greatest Generation'

By Lise Foy, Director
MS Agriculture & Forestry Museum

I often reminisce with the Mississippi Market Bulletin readers about things from my childhood and interactions with my parents and grandparents growing up on a little Mississippi hill country farm. There are so many things at the Ag Museum that bring this out in many of our visitors as well. Tom Brokaw coined the term 'Greatest Generation' to describe the generation who grew up in the United States during the deprivation of the Great Depression, and then went on to fight in World War II. There are many exhibits on display at the Ag Museum that contain artifacts from this era.

I am currently on a journey, via online class, to learn about artifact conservation and restoration. My recently assigned reading included an article (The Mark of a Masterpiece by David Grann) about an art connoisseur who claims to have the ability to authenticate priceless paintings through fingerprint forensics. Our challenge as we read our assignments is to apply the content to our work environment. As I read about this guy looking for fingerprints on a painting suspected to be a lost Leonardo da Vinci, I was struck by the thought that probably all of the artifacts at the Ag Museum have fingerprints on them. They were, in general, tools that people used to survive and make a living. In addition to the fingerprints, a forensic scientist could likely find blood, sweat, and tears, literally. And wouldn't we just love to talk to the people who matched those fingerprints.

My husband has begun to think and reminisce along with me as we look forward to passing on family stories and values we were taught to our two daughters, who incidentally will be a year old on July 22! What follows is a story he wrote about remembering his Papaw, who served in the army and met the Germans in Normandy. He was most definitely of the 'Greatest Generation'.

Papaw's Farmall

By: Jamie Foy

Growing up, my family made the trip, often several times a year, to visit my mother's family in Calhoun County. She grew up outside of Bruce along with two sisters and a brother, all of whom still live in the general area. Between opening

Christmas presents and spending summer days with cousins, my sister and I racked up plenty of great childhood memories. For me, many of those memories revolve around my Papaw's old Farmall tractor. It was a Model 200 that he bought new around 1954. International Harvester produced the Farmall 200 from 1954 through 1956. During that time, tractors were marketed according to the number of 16 inch plows they could pull in average soil to indicate power. The 200 was a two plow tractor and sold for $1970.00 in 1956.

Papaw originally used the tractor to farm about 80 acres which, along with a night job at the local furniture plant, provided a livelihood for his family. By the time I came along, most of the 80 acres had been rented out and the tractor was mostly used for gardening. Most parents would cringe at the thought of a child riding along on a tractor that didn't have much of a floorboard, much less any of today's common safety features, but that's one of the earliest memories I have of spending time with Papaw.

One year at Christmas, I gave him a small model Farmall tractor. The model is bright red (they called it

The Ag Museum has a collection of five Farmall tractors; an A, an H, and three Regulars.

Farmall red), just like the 200's were when they rolled out of the factory in Illinois. Papaw's old Farmall, however, was more of a rusted red than its original Farmall red. Even though the paint job didn't take the years so well, the old tractor is still running well. It took a dedicated regime of proper care and maintenance to make it last this long, but it also had to be built right from the beginning to provide so many years of service.

Compare that tractor to most of the seemingly disposable items we buy today. How many purchases do you make where you expect the item to last for sixty years? I'm just as guilty of this myself. "New car fever" strikes me occasionally and sometimes I find myself wanting a new iphone, even though my "old" one is working fine. I seriously doubt my grandfather could have envisioned us paying $500 for an item that we knew would be out of date within a few years.

During the time he owned the Farmall, there were big improvements in tractor technology. Why didn't he ever upgrade? The answer is simple: he didn't need to. His old Farmall was doing exactly what he needed it to do, so why would he spend hard earned money to buy another one only because it had the latest bells and whistles?

My grandparents grew up in a time where money was hard to come by and the things you spent that money on were valued and taken care of. Papaw lived through the Great Depression, fought in World War II, and raised four kids while farming in the day and working a factory job at night. Along with the rest of that generation, Papaw and Mamaw knew about making sacrifices. They might not have had the latest and greatest, but they had what they needed and they made it last.

Papaw died in 2007, and a few years later when my uncle asked if

I wanted the tractor, I told him no. At the time we were living in Greenwood with only a small backyard and no idea what I would do with the tractor. I should have figured something out. Saying no was a serious lapse in judgment. Luckily, the tractor was sold to someone local, and I have a goal of getting it back. In the meantime, I'll have to make do with the model that I inherited at my grandfather's death. It sits on a shelf at home and is a link for me to a time and culture that valued well made products and cared enough to make them last. Whenever I get to thinking that I want a new whatever, I look at that model Farmall and remind myself that I already have more than I need.

The Ag Museum has five Farmall tractors in our collection; an A, an H, and three Regulars.

We invite you to visit us and see our collection of artifacts that truly tell the story of Mississippi life in a way that you will not see elsewhere. I can almost guarantee you that there will be someone here who can tell you a story about one of our artifacts and the link to 'how it was done then to how it is done today.' These things are important. Help us pass them on.

The Ag Museum is located at 1150 Lakeland Drive in Jackson and is open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. In addition to our gallery and exhibit spaces, the Ag Museum also has room for your event, whether it's a meeting, a wedding, or other special event. Call (601) 432-4500 for information.

Mississippi's First Tea Farm off to Good Start

By Susan Collins-Smith

Mississippi's cold, wet winter and spring gave the state's new tea farm its first test.

Owner Jason McDonald and business partner Timothy Gipson started the farm in October. Their 250 one-gallon plants and 10 three-gallon plants are thriving this summer, despite some losses.

"The plants actually did really well," said Rebecca Bates, Mississippi State University Extension Service Lincoln County coordinator, who helped put together a team of MSU specialist to consult with McDonald in 2012 when he began planning the business venture. "We had some extremely cold weather this winter with snow and some ice. Spring brought a lot of rain and a few strong thunderstorms, but the plants look nice and are growing at a good rate."

The excess rainfall in the spring and fire ants caused them to lose a few of the plants. However, losses are expected in any agricultural business, said Nigel Melican, a United Kingdom-based tea-growing consultant with Teacraft Ltd.

"An established tea farm in a tea-growing country expects to have about 5 percent field losses, and Jason's losses are in this ballpark," said Melican, who is one of McDonald's advisors.

The cool temperatures have helped the plants get established by giving them a chance to develop a strong root system, Melican said.

"Jason's plants are growing strong and healthy," he said.

In anticipation of the arrival of additional plants from a North Carolina nursery on June 17, McDonald and Gipson installed about an acre of shade cloth and irrigation pipe. The plants will grow under the shade cloth until they are ready for planting.

"We were expecting 60,000 plants, but we didn't know until the truck arrived that the plans changed," McDonald said. "We received about half that many. We ended up with 27,712 small liner plants and 1,217 gallon-sized plants."

McDonald said the change would not delay the farm's progress. They propagated cuttings from the first 260 plants they planted in October and will begin a larger propagation program as early as July.

"We can take cuttings off the gallon-sized plants within a couple of weeks and have a few thousand plants that we already started rooting," McDonald said. "So we still have the 30,000 plants that we were planning to plant this year."

Over the next three to four months, the new arrivals will be transferred to larger pots as they grow. McDonald said about half of the plants should be strong enough to be planted in the fall. The remaining plants will go into the ground next spring, he said.

McDonald recently renamed the farm The Great Mississippi Tea Company. Originally named FiLoLi Tea Farm, the change is intended to strengthen the farm's connection to its home state. Facebook users cast votes on three different names, all of which included Mississippi.

"The change will help enhance interest in the farm and promote the local food movement," McDonald said.

From the mid-1790s through the early 20th century, many individuals and the U.S. government tried to grow tea commercially in the United States. Most of the operations failed because of the labor-intensive nature of the crop, Melican said.

Although tea was mostly imported, a few briefly successful ventures included a 200-acre Summerville, South Carolina, farm commissioned by the government in 1880, and The American Tea Growing Company, established in 1901 between Savannah, Georgia, and Charleston, South Carolina. One year later, the American Tea Growing Company acquired the Pinehurst Tea Garden, which was established in 1900. These operations manufactured and sold tea, but both collapsed within a year or two when the proprietors fell ill or died, Melican said.

Tea drinking waned after the Boston Tea Party but picked back up toward the end of the nineteenth century. Americans preferred green tea imported from China until the 1904

St. Louis World's Fair, where iced tea made from black tea was introduced, Melican said.

"During the first half of the twentieth century, green tea imports dropped from 60 percent to 5 percent in favor of black tea," he said.

Today, Americans still love tea, and some are interested in growing it.

Guihong Bi, an ornamental horticulture researcher with the Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station and professor in the MSU College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, is directing the Mississippi Tea Project. The research project is aimed at evaluating tea cultivars from the U.S. and around the world to develop a cultivar for commercial production that is best suited to the Mississippi climate. Bi and graduate student Judson LeCompte are working with McDonald to carry out part of the goals of the study.

The work will help establish the best propagation and production protocols, labor management, an integrated pest and disease management program, and weed and nutrient control methods.

"Tea beverages are second only to water as the most popular beverage in the world, with over 79 billion servings sold in the United States," Bi said. "We believe tea can be a viable alternative cash crop for conventional Mississippi farmers. The climate in Mississippi is ideal for growing camellias. Therefore, it should be suitable for tea production."

Mississippi Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce Cindy Hyde-Smith announced that a quarantine exemption has been issued by the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for the expanded use of Termidor® SC Termiticide/Insecticide EPA Reg. No. 7969-210 to aid in the control of an invasive crazy ant species, Nylanderia sp.nr. Pubens, commonly referred to as Raspberry or Tawny Crazy Ant.
