Good Crop Expected Despite Dropped Bolls

By Bonnie A. Coblentz
MSU Extension Service

Wet, cloudy weather has put a lot of cotton bolls on the ground, but experts still expect an above average crop from Mississippi's cotton acreage.

Darrin Dodds, cotton specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said experts knew boll loss was coming after all the recent rain.

"By the last week of July to early August, a lot of cotton was retaining 85 to 90 percent or more of its total fruit," Dodds said. "There are parts of the world where cotton can retain that high a percentage of bolls, but it's not going to happen here. We normally retain 50 to 60 percent of the bolls that are set."

Dodds said most of the bolls lost in early August were the younger pods in the middle to upper part of the plant.

"There's nothing a grower can do about that, and it essentially boils down to how much fruit can a plant produce," he said. "The plant will protect the bolls in the innermost positions close to the bottom of the plant."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimated that 74 percent of the cotton crop was in fair to good condition by Aug. 14, with 16 percent looking excellent. The maturity level was average for the last five years, and the crop's yield potential remains strong.

"I think we're still going to pick a good crop," Dodds said. "It may not be the 1,230-pound crop like we had a few years ago, but if we finish the rest of the year strong and the weather cooperates, it won't be 900 pounds an acre, either."

Target spot is a fungal disease that has affected cotton more this year than in the past. Tom Allen, Extension plant pathologist and Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station researcher, said the disease typically defoliates the lower to middle canopy.

"Lots of moisture and lots of humidity make for good fungal conditions," Allen said. "Once the disease gets started in a field, it's not really possible to make a fungicide application to slow the disease or prevent defoliation."

Dodds said thrips were a problem in cotton early in the season, with higher numbers of this pest than have been seen in recent years. Pressure from plant bugs, typically the biggest problem for cotton in the Delta, was lighter this year than in previous years. Spider mites caused problems in some areas, but growers were able to manage these pests.

Some cotton harvest is expected to begin by the third week of September, with harvest fully underway by the first of October. Cotton harvest typically finishes in early November.

"Early indications are that cotton acres may increase next year," Dodds said.

Cotton prices are part of what is driving increased interest in the crop for next year. Brian Williams, Extension agricultural economist, said October cotton prices are just over 68 cents a pound, with south Delta cash prices just under 67 cents a pound. Cash cotton was around 65 cents a pound at this time last year.

"Prices have been on a downward trend for the last couple of weeks," Williams said. "In early August, cash cotton was over 76 cents a pound, and futures peaked at just over 77 cents a pound. If you don't count the run-up in prices we saw in the last few weeks, cotton is still at the highest point in over two years."

Williams said there is a lot of uncertainty in cotton markets right now.

"A lot of traders are watching west Texas to see what kind of a crop they will have, since they are in the midst of another drought, but the current downward trend is more of a market correction," he said.

Most cotton bolls lost to rainy, wet weather in early August were the younger ones in the middle to upper part of the plant. Cotton, such as this growing August 18, 2016, on the Mississippi State University R.R. Foil Plant Research Center in Starkville, is expected to yield a better than average harvest. Game Day Brunch Ideas

Ham-Stuffed Biscuits with Mustard Butter

- 1 envelope (1/4-ounce) active dry yeast
- 1/2 cup warm water (100° to 110°)
- 2 cups buttermilk
- 5 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 1/2 tablespoons baking powder
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 3/4 cup shortening
- 2 pounds thinly sliced cooked ham

Mustard Butter

- 1 cup butter, softened
- 2 tablespoons minced sweet onion
- 2 tablespoons spicy brown mustard

Combine yeast and 1/2 cup warm water in a 4-cup liquid measuring cup, and let mixture stand for five minutes. Stir in buttermilk. Combine flour, baking powder, salt, baking soda, and sugar in a large bowl; cut in shortening with a pastry blender or fork until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add buttermilk mixture, stirring with a fork just until dry ingredients are moistened. Turn dough out onto a well-floured surface, and knead four to five times. Roll dough to 1/2-inch thickness; cut with a 2-inch round cutter, and place on lightly greased baking sheets. Cover and let rise in a warm place (85°), free from drafts, one hour. Bake at 425° for 10 to 12 minutes or until golden. To prepare mustard butter, stir together softened butter, onion and mustard until well blended. Split each biscuit, and spread evenly with mustard butter. Stuff biscuits with ham.

Bacon-Cheddar Corn Muffins

- 1 cup yellow cornmeal
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon smoked paprika
- 1 cup fresh corn kernels or frozen corn kernels, thawed
- 1 cup (4 ounces) shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
- 6 bacon slices, cooked and crumbled
- 2 large eggs, lightly beaten
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 1/2 cup butter, melted

Preheat oven to 400°. Line a 12-cup muffin pan with paper liners. Combine cornmeal, flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda, pepper and paprika in a medium bowl; stir in corn, cheese, and bacon. Whisk together eggs, buttermilk, and butter in a small bowl; stir egg mixture into cornmeal mixture just until blended (do not overmix). Spoon batter into prepared muffin pan. Bake 15 minutes or until a wooden pick inserted in center comes out with moist crumbs clinging. Remove muffins from pan; cool on a wire rack.

Sausage-Hash Brown
Brunch Casserole

- 1 pound mild ground pork sausage
- 1 pound hot ground pork sausage
- 1 30-ounce package frozen hash browns
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, divided
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
- 6 large eggs
- 2 cups milk

Cook sausages in a large skillet over medium-high heat, stirring until sausage crumbles and is no longer pink. Drain well. Prepare hash browns according to package directions, using 1/2 teaspoon salt and pepper. Stir together hash browns, sausage and cheese. Pour mixture into a lightly greased 13-x9-inch baking dish. Whisk together eggs, milk, and remaining one teaspoon salt. Pour evenly over potato mixture. Bake at 350° for 35 to 40 minutes.

Fruit Kebabs with Honey-Yogurt
Dipping Sauce

Light in September

By Erin Morin
Mississippi Agriculture
and Forestry Museum

“The past is never dead. It’s not even past.” This line by the legendary author William Faulkner is one that we at the Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum can certainly identify with. A native of New Albany, Mississippi, Faulkner remained a lifelong resident of our state, and his works captured the essence of rural Mississippi at the turn of the twentieth century.

Faulkner was largely influenced by his Mississippi roots. The fictional Yoknapatawpha County, wherein many of his works were set, was based on his own home of Lauderdale County. In his own way, Faulkner was a sort of informal cultural historian. His works are saturated with the agrarian culture he was surrounded by, frequently featuring casts of tenant farmers and sharecroppers. Faulkner himself was no stranger to the farm. In 1938, he bought a 320-acre farm which he named “Greenfield.” He grew corn and cotton, employed tenant farmers, and even operated a commissary there –although most of the farm’s operations fell under the supervision of his brother John.

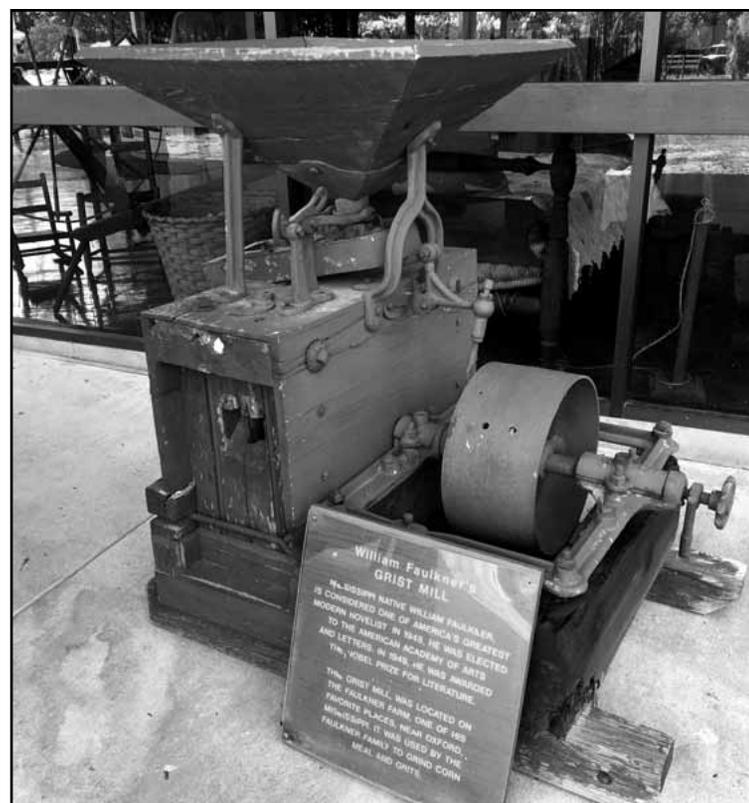

Faulkner by no means glorified farm life – he recognized it for what it was: A means for survival central to the people of the time. As explained by Ted Ownby, Director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at the University of Mississippi, “Faulkner tried to get inside almost everybody’s perspective, and of course in Mississippi in the early twentieth century, that meant understanding people on farms. He certainly didn’t write to celebrate farm life or to critique it; he was always trying to show tensions and contradictions... He has a lot of characters who think about debt or frugality or how to get by.”

Faulkner saw no need in gilding the lives of his characters; he took a realistic and pragmatic approach to his writing. Faulkner may not have sought to “celebrate” rural farm life, but he did preserve it. He kept the past alive in his works, which have endured a century of cultural evolution.

The Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum also seeks to keep the past alive, from the perspective of the 1920s crossroads town as well as that of the farmstead. On a visit to the museum, you can experience what life was like for Faulkner and his contemporaries. Walk through the Fortenberry-Parkman farmstead, a fully intact farm that originally operated in Jefferson-Davis County over 100 years ago. Explore Small Town and see what life was like for the town blacksmith, doctor or teacher. You can even see a bit of Faulkner’s legacy – we have the Faulkner family grist mill on display here.

The Ag Museum is located at 1150 Lakeland Drive in Jackson and is open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. In addition to our gallery and exhibit spaces, the Ag Museum also has room for your occasion, whether it’s a meeting, a wedding or other special event. Call (601) 432-4500, visit www.msagmuseum.org or email msagmuseum@mdac.ms.gov for information.

The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Businesses, corporations, dealerships, brokers or other commercial enterprises are not allowed to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin.

Advertising rules and guidelines have been established for the Mississippi Market Bulletin in order to comply with regulations enforced by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce and to maintain the objectives of the publication. Historic August Flooding Will Cost Louisiana Agriculture at Least $110 Million

By Olivia McClure
LSU AgCenter Communications

Heavy rains that recently caused historic flooding in south Louisiana will cost the state's agriculture industry at least $110 million, according to preliminary estimates from the LSU AgCenter.

That figure is expected to grow as farmers realize the full extent of flood damage, said AgCenter economist Kurt Guidry. Many factors — including crop yield and quality reductions, increased production costs, infrastructure damage and loss of stored commodities — are not immediately clear. And daily rains that are typical of summer weather patterns could slow the fall of floodwaters, delay harvest and cause even more damage to crops and animals.

The soybean crop will likely take the hardest hit, with about $46 million in yield losses expected. Very little of the 420,000 acres of soybeans in affected areas had been harvested before the flood, Guidry said.

"This is particularly true in the sugarcane-growing region, where soybeans were ready to be harvested at the time of flooding," he said. "Many of those acres that flooded will experience nearly 100 percent losses."

Yield reductions will cost the Louisiana rice industry about $33 million. Much of the south Louisiana crop was already harvested, but about 20 percent, or 72,000 acres, remained in the field during the flood.

Those fields may be a total loss, and any rice that is harvested will likely sell for lower prices because of sprouting and reduced milling quality, Guidry said. Farmers may not be able to produce a ratoon, or second, crop, he said.

At least $3 million worth of sugarcane will have to be replanted, Guidry said. About 15 percent of the 100,000 to 120,000 acres that is planted every August and September was planted before the flood, he said. Poor field conditions may delay or prohibit planting the rest of those acres before harvest season.

"Once harvest begins, producers do not have the labor or resources to both plant and harvest at the same time," Guidry said. "This could cause some acres to not be planted. This has a tremendous multiplier effect due to sugarcane's multiyear production cycle."

Corn-producing areas did not receive heavy flooding damage, although wet field conditions have delayed harvest, which can cause plants to fall over and grains to sprout, Guidry said. Those issues could cost corn farmers $10 million.

Other crops, including vegetables, fruits, sweet potatoes, cotton and grain sorghum, also received some flood damage.

It is not yet clear how many livestock deaths the flood caused. Reduced pasture resources and forage availability will cost producers nearly $2 million, Guidry said.

During the March floods, about 600 cattle were lost, which Guidry expected to be the upper limit of how many could be lost from the most recent weather event.

But he said there are reports of some livestock getting sick from drinking polluted flood waters, which could continue to drive the numbers up.

The AgCenter will release a more detailed assessment on the flood's damage to farming within a few weeks.

LDAF Launches GoFundMe Donation Page

By Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry

Devastating flooding has impacted multiple parishes in Louisiana. Donations are needed to assist the animal relief efforts underway by the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) and parish governments. The funds collected will be used to provide supplies and equipment necessary to care for numerous pets and livestock in shelters operated by the LDAF and parish governments.

"One of the many lessons learned during Hurricane Katrina in 2005 is that many people would not leave their family pets to get out of harm's way. Our job is to provide shelter and care for pets and livestock, when needed, so Louisiana residents can have comfort in knowing their pets are safe and being cared for," said Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M.

Need Hay? Have Hay? LFBF Activates Hay Clearinghouse

By Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation

The Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation's (LFBF) Hay Clearinghouse is currently active for those flood affected livestock owners who need hay to feed cattle or horses, those who have hay to donate, or can volunteer to haul hay to affected areas of the state.

"The purpose of the LFBF Hay Clearinghouse is to match those who have hay with those who need it," said Clearinghouse coordinator

Carey Martin. "If you can haul a load of hay, that is our biggest need in a disaster like this."

In the north Louisiana flooding this spring, Martin said thousands of bales were donated, but there was a severe lack of transportation and much of that hay could not get to those who needed it.

The LFBF Hay Clearinghouse is hosted on the website VoiceofLouisianaAgriculture.org. After accessing the site, click the "Hay Clearinghouse" link at the top of the page.
