June's Ideal Weather Has Corn Looking Good

By Bonnie Coblentz
MSU Ag Communications

June's frequent rains and cool nighttime temperatures seem custom-made for corn, and the result is optimistic farmers looking at a great crop with tremendous yield potential.

Erick Larson, grain crops agronomist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said the crop is as much as 10 days early and looking good.

"We've had a lot of favorable conditions lately that should be very beneficial and will hopefully lead to a more productive crop than we've seen in the last few years," Larson said.

2007 is the record year for corn in Mississippi; the state averaged 148 bushels of corn per acre. The last two years have been hot and dry, and the state's average has been between 126 and 136 bushels an acre.

"Our yields have been steadily increasing with better management over time, and we may be able to produce more than the 2007 yields this year if favorable conditions continue," Larson said.

June is the most important month for corn production, as the crop is in its reproductive stages. High temperatures, especially at night, hinder grain fill and lead to low yields.

About 50 percent of the state's corn crop is irrigated. Recent, regular rains across much of the state have helped provide the nearly 2 inches of moisture corn needs each week in June. For irrigated fields, production costs are lower, and for dry land corn, the plants are getting the moisture they need at a critical time.

"Getting ample rainfall during

High winds, such as the ones that accompanied recent severe weather, can snap young corn stalks in two. These plants on Mississippi State University's R.R. Foil Research Center near Starkville experienced greensnap from a June 1 storm but were rebounding by June 6, when the photo was taken. (Photo by MSU Extension Service/Erick Larson)

June and having moderate temperatures are extremely important to corn productivity," Larson said. "If these weather conditions hold through this month and early July, our crop outlook should be very good."

Recent severe weather, including hail and high winds, has caused localized, severe damage in areas around the state since May 20.

Ernie Flint, Extension agronomic crops agent in Attala County, said his area dodged the recent wind damage but had problems with hail in one 20-square-mile area.

"We had to replant several hundred acres of soybeans and cotton. The corn was just smashed, but I have been amazed at how well it has recovered," Flint said. "It certainly reduced the leaf area, and we've yet to know what impact that will have on yield. The ears don't appear to be damaged, but we'll have to wait and see when they mature."

But the rest of the area's corn crop looks phenomenal, he said.

"This is the best pollination I've seen we have in several years. The ear size is fabulous," Flint said.

Don Respass, Coahoma County director for the MSU Extension Service, said the high winds blew some corn over, but he expects most of it to straighten up. Overall, area corn looks wonderful.

"I think we have a tremendous possibility of a good crop," Respass said. "Our crop is a little early, and we will probably start harvest in late July this year."

Conditions have been ideal for corn to date, and prices are average.

John Michael Riley, Extension agricultural economist, said new crop prices are $4.75 to $4.90 a bushel in Mississippi, and September futures are $5.20 per bushel. These prices meet the five-year average, but they are about $2.50 a bushel lower than prices this time last year.

"There is quite a divide between corn that is in bins now -- the old crop -- and that in the field -- the new crop," Riley said. "Supplies of old crop corn remain tight, and prices are around $6 per bushel. However, the increased acreage and the ahead-of-schedule crop have production estimates on the high side, even record-breaking, if the current projections come true."

Riley said hot and dry weather across the United States, especially in the Corn Belt, has many concerned about final yields.

"The market has been on quite the rollercoaster lately, dealing with issues such as the large number of corn acres, its being ahead of schedule, and deteriorating crop conditions in some parts of the country," he said.

From Our Kitchen To Yours

Fresh Corn Recipes...

*****

FRESH CORN OFF THE COB SOUP

8 cups fresh corn kernels (cut from 14 to 16 ears of corn)
6 cups water
1 tablespoon coarse salt
Whole milk
Sour cream for garnish (optional)
1/4 cup chopped fresh chives

In a large pot with salt in the water, simmer corn kernels, covered, 20 minutes, or until very tender. Remove from heat. In a blender or food processor, puree soup in batches until very smooth (use caution when blending hot liquids). As each batch is pureed, pour through a coarse sieve, pressing on solids, into a bowl. In a large saucepan, heat soup, stirring. Thin soup to desired thickness with whole milk. Soup may be served hot or chilled. Serve topped with a dollop of sour cream and sprinkled with chives. Soup may be made 3 days ahead and cooled, chilled, covered, and refrigerated.

LEMON-GARLIC GLAZED CORN ON THE COB

1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
2 cloves garlic, minced
4 ears corn, husk & silk removed
1/3 cup water
2 tablespoons fresh-squeezed lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

In a large frying pan over medium heat, combine the butter and olive oil. Add minced garlic and cook, stirring, until fragrant but not browned, about 1 minute. Add corn, water, lemon juice, salt, and pepper. Cover and cook, gently shaking the pan occasionally to turn the cobs, for 5 minutes. Uncover pan and continue cooking, turning the cobs occasionally, until all but a few tablespoons of liquid has evaporated, approximately 2 to 4 minutes more. Remove from heat. Serve the corn drizzled with the remaining lemon-garlic pan sauce.

AVOCADO-CORN SALSA

2 small to medium ripe avocados, peeled, seeded & finely diced
1 cup fresh or frozen corn kernels
2 medium tomatoes, seeded & finely diced
2 to 3 tablespoons fresh-squeezed lime juice
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh cilantro
1/2 to 1 teaspoon minced hot green chile peppers
Sliced olives (optional)
1/2 teaspoon salt

In a medium bowl, gently combine avocado, corn kernels, tomatoes, lime juice, cilantro, chile peppers, olives and salt. Cover and refrigerate until ready to be served.

CORN RADISH SALAD WITH CHILI-JALAPENO DRESSING

4 ears of raw sweet corn, husked & silk removed
10 to 12 radishes, thinly sliced
1/2 cup either thinly sliced or small diced red onion
1/2 to 3/4 cup coarsely chopped cilantro leaves
1/2 to 1 jalapeno chile pepper, seeded & coarsely chopped
3 tablespoons fresh-squeezed lime juice
3 teaspoons honey
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1/2 teaspoon coarse salt or sea salt

Scrape the corn kernels from the ears of corn by using a sharp kitchen knife and cutting board. Cut off the stem end to give a flat base. Hold the ear, tip end up, then cut downward, removing a few rows at a time. Place cut corn kernels in a large bowl. Add sliced radishes, diced onion, and cilantro leaves; set aside. In a blender, puree the chile pepper, lime juice, honey, and olive oil. Add lime juice mixture to the bowl with the corn kernels. Season to taste with salt. Refrigerate salad for about 1/2 hour before serving. Just before serving toss in fresh basil. Taste for seasonings and serve cold or at room temperature.

GRILLED CORN ON THE COB WITH LIME & CHILE

Fresh ears of corn, husk and silk removed Butter or vegetable oil spray
Fresh limes
Chile powder or paprika (optional)
Salt and pepper

In a large pot (to hold the amount of corn you want to cook) of water over high heat, bring water to a boil. Add husked corn ears and boil corn 3 to 4 minutes or until tender. Remove corn from boiling water. Coat with butter or vegetable oil spray.

Preheat barbecue grill with rack approximately 4 inches from the fire. Place cooked corn on hot grill. Cook only until grill marks appear on the corn and the corn is reheated. Remove from heat. Squeeze lime over corn and sprinkle with chile powder or paprika. Salt and pepper to taste and serve.

General Food Safety Training for Mississippi Certified Farmers' Market Vendors

July 16, 2012—Batesville 9:30 a.m.

July 16, 2012—Indianola 2:00 p.m.

July 18, 2012—Jackson 10:00 a.m.

July 18, 2012—Philadelphia 2:30 p.m.

July 20, 2012—Hattiesburg 10:30 a.m.

July 26, 2012—Verona 10:00 a.m.

The General Farmer's Market Food Safety Training is a two hour workshop designed to teach the basics of food safety and regulations for processing foods in Mississippi. This training will qualify you for processing foods that can be sold in local, certified farmers' markets in Mississippi. This training does not allow you to sell elsewhere or ship interstate.

Food processors who prepare food products for sale at the MS Certified Farmers' Markets (farmers' markets that are certified by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce) must complete a General Farmers' Market Food Safety Training and have their home kitchen or processing facility permitted by the MS State Department of Health. Please note that is class is the General Food Safety Training and does not include the Acidified Canned Foods Safety Class.

A General Farmers' Market Food Safety Training is required for all processed food vendors that attend Mississippi Certified Farmers' Markets. However, if you have an updated and valid ServSafe Certification from the Mississippi State Department of Health, that will suffice.

For more details or to register, contact Anna Hood at annah@ext.msstate.edu or 662-325-8056. Online registration is available at www.fsnhp.msstate.edu/farmersmarkettraining.

Prevent Common Problems For Ideal Garden Tomatoes

By Bonnie Coblenz
MSU Ag Communications

While nothing may beat the fresh taste of a home-grown tomato, a lot of things can go wrong in the garden to prevent the fruit from ever making it to the table.

Blossom-end rot, seen on this tomato, is a common problem in home gardens. It is typically caused by uneven watering, which prevents enough calcium from reaching the fruit. Garden experts say tomato plants should be watered well, fertilized correctly, grown in direct sunlight, and spaced properly so their leaves stay as dry as possible.

David Nagel, vegetable and home garden specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, listed three common problems that can plague tomato plants.

“Blossom-end rot, usually caused by uneven watering; early blight, caused by a fungus; and poor fruit set, often caused by over-fertilization and temperatures above 94 degrees, can all affect a tomato plant’s ability to produce good fruit,” Nagel said.

Proper moisture helps to prevent blossom-end rot. Apply one inch of water each week and two inches a week when fruit are set, Nagel said.

Rick Snyder, Extension greenhouse tomato specialist, said blossom-end rot is the result of a lack of calcium in the fruit, even though there may be enough calcium in the soil, leaves, and stems.

“Calcium is not transported well in the plant unless conditions are ideal, so sometimes calcium does not make it all the way to the fruit,” Snyder said.

Only a soil test will show if calcium levels are low in the soil. If the soil pH is low, add limestone, which is calcium carbonate, to raise the pH as recommended. This will also add the needed calcium. If the calcium is low but the pH is correct, side dress with calcium nitrate --not ammonium nitrate -- to be sure enough calcium is added to the soil.

Soil tests are available for a small fee through county offices of the MSU Extension Service.

Mulching tomato plants to hold in moisture can help prevent blossom-end rot. Only root hairs can take up calcium. Snyder said if the plants wilt, root hairs die and the plant cannot take in calcium in adequate amounts.

Early blight, caused by Alternaria fungus, is another problem tomatoes often face in the summer.

“Keep the leaves as dry as possible by spacing the plants so that wind can blow through them, and treat with fungicides if early blight appears in your garden,” Nagel said.

Address poor fruit set by carefully following fertilizer recommendations. In Mississippi, grow tomato varieties that are heat-tolerant.

Some gardeners have been taught to apply Epsom salts, which are magnesium sulfate, to the base of tomato plants. Nagel said these salts are beneficial in very sandy soils that tend to be sulfur deficient or other soils that are magnesium deficient. However, a soil test is the only way to find out exactly what a garden needs.

Most Mississippi gardeners know to have their tomatoes planted by Easter, but not everyone realizes a second crop can be grown, too. Fall tomatoes grow very well in Mississippi. Depending on the planting zone, fall tomatoes should be transplanted sometime in July.

Two Steps Needed For Fire Ant Control

By Keri Lewis
MSU Ag Communications

Fire ants are one of the most frustrating insect pests to deal with in Mississippi lawns, but they can be successfully controlled with the correct approach.

“There is a lot of confusion when it comes to treating fire ants, but it is not that complicated,” said Blake Layton, an entomology specialist with Mississippi State University’s Extension Service. “I recommend using what I call the one-two punch.”

The first step is to apply granular fire ant baits to the entire yard three times per year – around Easter, the Fourth of July and Labor Day. Follow that up by treating any mounds the bait treatments miss.

for routine use, but they are the best choice when you need quick elimination,” Layton said. “For instance, if a mound is next to the patio where a party is planned for that evening, use a drench.”

Always use a product appropriate for the area where it will be applied and follow the directions carefully, Layton said.

Other non-native species, including Argentine ants, dark rover ants and hairy crazy ants, are also causing problems in Mississippi. All three of these species are difficult to control because of their large populations.

“Historically, Argentine ants were a serious pest in Mississippi, but due to area-wide treatment plans in the early to mid-1900s, effective control was achieved,” said Joe MacGown, a research technician who special-

“Baits are the foundation for a good fire ant control program because they can eliminate newly formed fire ant colonies before they become large mounds,” Layton said. “The ants collect the bait granules, carry them back to the mound and feed them to the developing larvae.”

Bait treatments are quick and easy to apply. They are inexpensive when used at the proper rate. They should give about 90 percent control when used properly.

“That means you will have one-tenth as many problem mounds using baits as compared to not using baits,” Layton said.

Treat mounds that pop up between broadcast bait treatments with individual mound treatments.

“Unlike granular baits, mound treatments are applied directly to the mound and come in dry and liquid formulas,” Layton said. “These kill by contact rather than by being eaten.”

Dry mound treatments are quick and easy to apply but take a few days to provide control. Liquid formulas, or drenches, take more time to prepare but eliminate the mound within just a few hours.

“Drenches are too much trouble

izes in ants in the Department of Biochemistry, Molecular Biology, Entomology and Plant Pathology at MSU. “However, we have seen a resurgence in levels of this species in recent years.
