2012 Census of Agriculture – Be Counted

By USDA-NASS

“Over the next few days, farmers and ranchers across the state will receive the 2012 Census of Agriculture in the mail. I encourage each of you to take the time to complete and return the Census by February 4, 2013. This is one of the easiest ways that you as a producer can let your agricultural voice be heard. The information that is obtained through the Census is about much more than just how many producers we have in our great state. The information that you provide is used by leaders and policy-makers on both the local and national levels when making decisions that are critical in shaping the future of Mississippi agriculture. Please take this opportunity to let your voice be heard by being counted.”

Cindy Hyde-Smith
Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce

Mississippi's farmers and ranchers have the opportunity to make a positive impact on their communities by taking part in the 2012 Census of Agriculture. The National Agriculture Statistics Service (NASS) mailed out Census questionnaires on December 28, 2012, to collect data for the 2012 calendar year. Help grow your farm future and be counted by returning your completed 2012 Census of Agriculture form by February 4, 2013.

For more information about the 2012 Census of Agriculture, please contact the NASS Mississippi Field Office at (601) 965-4575 or visit www.agcensus.usda.gov online.

Frequently Asked Questions About The Census of Agriculture

What is the Census of Agriculture?

The Census of Agriculture, taken every five years, is a complete count of U.S. farms and ranches and the people who operate them. The Census looks at land use and ownership, operator characteristics, production practices, income and expenditures, and many other areas. For America's farmers and ranchers, the Census of Agriculture is their voice, their future, and their responsibility.

Who uses Census of Agriculture data?

Census data is used by all those who serve farmers and rural communities - federal, state and local governments, agribusinesses, trade associations, and many others. For instance, companies and cooperatives use the information to determine the locations of facilities that will serve agricultural producers. Community planners use the information to target needed services to rural residents. USDA uses the information to ensure that local service centers are staffed at appropriate levels. Legislators use the information when shaping farm policies and programs. And, of course, farmers and ranchers can use Census data to help make informed decisions about the future of their own operations.

How is the Census conducted?

Report forms for the 2012 Census of Agriculture were mailed to farm and ranch operators on December 28, 2012 to collect data for the 2012

New Year's Game Day Treats

WARM TURNIP GREEN DIP

5 bacon slices, chopped
1/2 medium-size sweet onion, chopped
2 garlic cloves, chopped
1/4 cup dry white wine
1 16-ounce package frozen chopped turnip greens, thawed
(Use fresh turnip greens if available)
12 ounces cream cheese, cut into pieces
1 8-ounce container sour cream
1/2 teaspoon dried crushed red pepper
1/4 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
Garnish: dried crushed red pepper
Assorted crackers, flatbread, and gourmet wafers

Preheat oven to broil. Cook bacon in a Dutch oven over medium-high heat 5 to 6 minutes or until crisp; remove bacon, and drain on paper towels, reserving 1 tablespoon drippings in pan. Sauté onion and garlic in hot drippings 3 to 4 minutes. Add wine, and cook 1 to 2 minutes; alcohol will cook off as you stir to loosen particles from the bottom of the pan. Stir in turnip greens, cream cheese, sour cream, crushed red pepper, and salt. Add 1/4 of the Parmesan cheese and stir to combine. Cook, stirring often, 6 to 8 minutes or until cream cheese is melted and mixture is thoroughly heated. Transfer to a lightly greased 1 1/2-quart baking dish. Make certain that you use a broiler-safe baking dish. Sprinkle with remaining Parmesan cheese. Broil 6 inches from heat 4 to 5 minutes or until cheese is lightly browned. Sprinkle with bacon. Garnish, if desired. Serve with assorted crackers, flatbread, and wafers.

HOPPIN' JOHN PARFAITS

1 cup uncooked basmati rice
3 bacon slices
1 cup chopped onion
1 jalapeno pepper, seeded & minced
2 15.8-ounce cans black-eyed peas, drained & rinsed
1 large tomato, finely chopped
2 green onions, thinly sliced
1 celery rib, finely chopped
1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley
1/4 cup olive oil
2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded pepper Jack cheese

Prepare rice according to package directions. Meanwhile, cook bacon in a medium skillet over medium-high heat until crisp. Remove bacon, and drain on paper towels, reserving 1 tablespoon drippings in skillet. Once well drained, crumble bacon, and set aside. Sauté onion and jalapeno pepper in hot drippings 3 to 5 minutes or until lightly browned; stir in black-eyed peas and one cup of water. Reduce heat to medium, and simmer, stirring occasionally, 5 to 7 minutes or until liquid has almost completely evaporated. Stir together tomato, green onions, celery, parsley, olive oil, and apple cider vinegar in a small bowl. Layer black-eyed pea mixture, hot cooked rice, and tomato mixture in 12 7-ounce glasses. Top with cheese and crumbled bacon.

BOILED PEANUT HUMMUS

2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons creamy peanut butter
1 1/2 teaspoons hot sauce
1 teaspoon minced fresh garlic
1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
Olive oil
Pepper
Garnish: fresh cilantro sprigs

Process peanuts, water, cilantro, lime juice, 2 tablespoons olive oil, peanut butter, hot sauce, garlic, and cumin in food processor for one minute or until smooth. Spoon mixture into small bowls, and drizzle with olive oil; sprinkle with pepper, and garnish with fresh cilantro sprigs. Serve hummus with carrot or celery sticks.

of operation. For Census purposes, a farm is any place from which $1,000 or more of agricultural products were produced and sold, or normally would have been sold, during the Census year.

Must I respond to the Census?

Yes. United States law (Title 7, U.S. Code) requires all those who receive a Census report form to respond even if they did not operate a farm or ranch in 2012.

Where can I find Census of Agriculture data?

Census of Agriculture data is available through the NASS field office in your state, as well as many depository libraries, universities and state government offices. It is also available online at www.nass.usda.gov or www.agcensus.usda.gov. For additional information on the Census of Agriculture or any NASS survey, call the Agricultural Statistics Hotline at (800) 727-9540.

What if I only have a small operation or do not participate in government farm programs?

The Census of Agriculture is the responsibility of every farmer and rancher, regardless of the size or type

Advertising Guidelines

The Mississippi Market Bulletin is published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The Mississippi Market Bulletin is an important way for the Department to disseminate news and information about issues affecting Mississippi's agriculture industry and the Department's operations.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Grain Bin Accidents Are 100 Percent Preventable

By Keri Collins Lewis
MSU Ag Communications

With Mississippi's bumper corn crop on target to break records, proper post-harvest handling is essential, especially efforts to prevent deaths by grain entrapment.

As farmers plant more grain crops, on-site storage bins are popping up all over the state.

"We're handling more corn than ever before in our history, and proper handling of all grain crops can help reduce the number of accidents related to grain bin storage," said Jason Ward, an Extension associate in Mississippi State University's Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering. "Grain bin accidents are 100 percent preventable."

Ward said moisture, mold growth or grain degradation can clump together corn, rice, soybean or wheat grains. Temperature differences between air inside and outside the grain bin cause moisture to migrate either to the walls of the bin or to the center. Grain can stick to the walls or form a solid core within the bin that keeps grain from flowing smoothly while unloading.

Ward said farmers or employees sometimes climb into the bin and try to dislodge grain with a long metal pole, unaware of the potential dangers.

Grain bins, or silos, can turn into death traps when the grain breaks loose and turns into an avalanche, suffocating or crushing the worker. Air inside the tightly constructed bins can also be hazardous and flammable.

"If someone stands at the bottom and tries to get grain off the sides of the bin, he can become engulfed in grain when it gives way," he said.

"If he's standing on top of a pile of grain to break through a crust, or a section of bridged grain breaks loose beneath him, he can suddenly fall into a cavity, with grain sliding in on top of him."

A person can be entrapped within seconds. Because many farmers work alone and are not required to use safety equipment, the danger is even greater.

"I always say the first rule of entering a bin is don't ever go into a bin," Ward said. "Since that is not realistic, I tell people never to go in a bin alone. Make sure someone knows you are in there. Make sure the augers are turned off, locked and tagged with a note letting others know you are in the bin. Make sure the fans are turned on to keep fresh air circulating."

Ward said a three-person team should work on the problem: one at the top by the door, one on the grain wearing a safety harness or rope, and one on the ground to get help if needed.

Several commercially made grain-rescue products, such as coffer dams, are available to retrieve someone entrapped in grain. They are required for larger, commercial grain operations that must follow the U.S. Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration, or OSHA, standards. Ward and his MSU colleagues designed a low-cost coffer dam out of plywood and structural lumber. Instructions are available online from MSU's Extension Service, Publication 2598, "Construction of a Low-Cost Cofferdam for Grain Bin Rescue," <http://msucare.com/pubs/publications/p2598.pdf>.

The coffer dam, which is essentially a portable tube, prevents grain from flowing against the entrapped victim. Grain can then be removed from inside the tube, creating a space around the victim and relieving the pressure that prevents escape.

While proper moisture management in silos keeps grain flowing, Ward said if grain becomes stuck, there are products on the market that can break up the grain without anyone entering the bin. Most of these require installation before the bin is filled.

Erick Larson, state grain crops specialist with MSU's Extension Service, said proper handling and storage of grain crops after harvest protects both people and profit.

"Grain is a living organism, and we need to keep it dry and generally cool to maintain quality," Larson said. "When temperatures go from 95 degrees in the summer to 25 in the winter, we can have problems with moisture condensation inside a bin or any storage device. Also, mycotoxins, especially aflatoxin, can jeopardize quality if the grain is not properly stored."

Running fans to blow air through the grain in the bins keeps grain dry and at a stable temperature. The fans are usually at the bottom of the bin, under the ventilated floor.

"However, this may cause moisture to deposit in the top layer of grain and develop a crust, which can become a safety hazard," he said.

Larson said many farms may not have a full workforce around at this time of year. A short staff means people may endanger themselves by working without a partner.

"Farmers are self-reliant, and often they get in trouble by tackling a chore alone rather than making sure someone is there to assist them," he said. "They may not perceive it as a dangerous environment because grain storage is a new task for many Mississippi growers."

"Use common sense and knowledge of safety issues associated with working in grain bins. Keep the grain safe. Maintain your safety and that of your employees who are handling the grain," he said.

Conduct Soil, Nematode Tests Before Spring Work

By Bonnie Coblentz

Two soil tests conducted routinely help Mississippi producers ensure the productivity of their farmland.

Soil tests in the fall to determine fertility levels and nematode tests in the spring to detect harmful pests help producers improve soil quality before spring tillage and planting begin.

Keith Crouse, Mississippi State University Extension Service agronomy specialist and coordinator of the MSU Soil Testing and Plant Analysis Lab, said fall tests give growers time to correct any problems revealed in the samples. Much of this work can be done in the fall when primary tillage is performed.

"If lime is needed to adjust soil pH, fall application allows time for the lime to react with soil so the soil pH will be adjusted before the following spring," Crouse said.

He recommended soil tests be taken every three years. Soil tests conducted by the Extension Service determine soil pH levels, organic matter and estimated reserve sulfur, phosphorus, potassium, calcium, magnesium, sodium and zinc. Soil test reports list the nutrients tested and fertility recommendations for lime and nutrients needed for the crops to be grown.

Wayne Ebelhar, Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station agronomist at the Delta Research and Extension Center in Stoneville, said the value of the information received in a soil or nematode test is priceless.

"A soil test is your diagnostic tool to determine where you stand," Ebelhar said. "If you've been putting out fertilizer with no soil test, and your soil test levels are extremely high, indicating you don't need to apply any fertilizer, the soil test can save you potentially thousands and thousands of dollars in fertilizer you don't need."

At the other extreme, no amount of irrigation or other management inputs can boost productivity on soils that severely lack fertilizer or have a soil pH imbalance that can be corrected with lime application.

"A particular parcel of land can have multiple factors limiting productivity, and a soil test lets you know what some of these are so you can attack the most limiting factor first," Ebelhar said. "The test is a diagnostic tool."

Clarissa Balbalian, diagnostic lab manager of MSU's soil lab, said nematode testing is ideally done during the growing season, but logistics make it easier to do right before spring planting. This MSU lab also serves as the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce-Bureau of Plant Industry's regulatory plant pathology lab.

"There are 16 plant-parasitic nematodes of concern in Mississippi across all types of vegetation, from row crops to golf courses. Root-knot nematode and reniform nematode are among the most common that cause problems," Balbalian said. "Nematodes are everywhere as long as there is some kind of plant for them to feed on."

Nematodes are microscopic, worm-like invertebrates. The types producers are concerned about parasitize plant roots, feeding on the nutrients plants need. Nematodes reduce a crop's yield potential. In the case of crops such as sweet potatoes, can lower marketability by deforming the potatoes.

"A nematode test will tell producers what nematodes are present, highlight those over threshold and suggest a control management strategy, such as crop rotation with suggested varieties and a nematicide treatment," Balbalian said.

Research has established population thresholds for nematodes. Some form of management is recommended when nematode numbers exceed these thresholds.

"Ways to manage a nematode infestation include a chemical seed coat or fumigation of the land before or as a crop is planted," Balbalian said. "You also can plant varieties that are resistant to certain nematodes or are not hosts, so the population drops as they have nothing to feed on."

The MSU Extension Plant Pathology Lab charges $11 per sample to test soil for nematodes and provide a management plan. Information on how to collect samples for nematodes, nematode thresholds and more is available at <http://msucare.com/lab>. A routine soil analysis at the MSU Soil Testing and Plant Analysis Lab costs $6 per sample. Visit <http://msucare.com/crops/soils> to learn more.
