Marketing and Selling Hay

By Rocky Lemus, PhD
Extension Forage Specialist
Mississippi State University

Hay is an important crop in any area where cattle, horses, goats, and sheep are present. Due to severe drought conditions in the last couple of years throughout different parts of the country, this has created an increasing interest in cash hay production. Data from hay-cost return budgets at Mississippi State University as well as quality data indicate that cash hay production in the state is only marginally profitable for producers achieving average yields, quality, and prices.

Price and quality is being affected by low fertilization and sacrificing quality for forage quantity. Because of these management practices, it is important that hay producers develop a strategic plan to market and sell their hay if they wish to make a net addition of their farm income.

The primary focus of a marketing program should be on improving profitability of the hay enterprise. It is also important to make a distinction between selling and marketing hay. Many hay growers in Mississippi simply sell hay and have no interest in devoting substantial time and attention to develop a hay marketing program. They are selling a commodity to low bidders to simply dispose extra forage rather than developing a market for a product.

To be most effective in marketing hay, growers should attempt to target sales by type, cutting sequence, nutritional quality, and bale size. Based on some of these conditions, a hay producer should understand what some basic and essential principles for marketing hay are:

Determine where the market opportunities are located: type of market and location (local, regional, or national).

The market is very different among beef producers, dairy producers, and horse owners. Horse owners usually pay more for high quality hay than dairy producers. This is because dairy producers tend to substitute roughage, energy, and protein sources to achieve a more balanced ration. Lower-quality hay is usually targeted to the beef cattle industry since beef cows can effectively use lower quality hay.

In general, the beef industry focuses on supplementing only if energy and protein from hay production is poor and ignore other quality components such as digestibility and intake.

Producing high quality hay.

This is where the market for hay production starts. When hay supply exceeds demand, producers are going to be more selective. Remember that high quality hay does not necessarily mean highest nutritive value. What is high quality to one person may be considered mediocre quality by someone else. Quality is in the eye of the beholder. It depends on who is buying the hay and their specific standards.

For example a horse owner might be interested in hay with good green color, and ample leafiness with a lack of mold, odor, and dust. Determining if your targeted market will pay a sufficient premium for high quality hay should be part of the market analysis. This will help determine what harvest management system might best fit your operation.

Understand the size of bales that will fit the targeted market.

Regardless of the bale size, produce a solid bale. The size, weight, and shape of the bale can have a great impact in marketing strategies because buyers look for convenience. Bales need to be moved easily. That means that bales need to be tight, light, and easy to transport.

Bale size and density usually limit marketing strategies because payloads are charged based on mileage rather than weight. Loose bales break apart easily and make them hard to load and handle. Calibrate your baler to make firm bales that are easy to handle.

Remember that the cost of transportation will be dictated by the size of the bale.

The cost of transporting hay is a major consideration when selling into any market. Trucking rates will reflect current fuel prices, so be sure to check with trucking firms to obtain up-to-date hauling charges.

Transportation of hay requires knowledge of trucking rules and regulations, not only at the point of loading, but also in the various jurisdictions that the hay will be passing through on the way to its final destination. Knowledge of maximum lengths, widths, and weights, permits and phytosanitary or quarantine requirements are also needed.

Hay storage is an integral part of hay marketing.

Storing the hay properly will reduce quality and yield losses. It is also important to store hay by type, cutting, and quality. In other words, separate hay by lots. Leaving space between lots will allow quick and easy access to hay at any time to meet the customer's need.

Small square bales are often stored in a barn. Large bales may be stored outside, or they could be left outside. Significant storage losses occur in bales that are stored uncovered outside.

Produce a consistent hay supply and be realistic on the price.

Long-time customers would like to have hay with consistent quality that will minimize adjusting feeding programs. Do not try to hide and sell low-quality bales in the middle of a load. Meeting the customer's need to the furthest extent possible is part of a successful marketing strategy.

Hay prices are usually lower at harvest, and then increase as hay supply begins to decrease. Hay prices in Mississippi usually peak from October to January.

Summary

In advertising and merchandising hay effectively over a long period of time, it is advisable to be honest, treat customers fairly, understand, and try to fill the needs of customers and be specific about hay available for sale.

Let me emphasize again that hay marketing starts with hay production. Do not waste your time if you are going to grow mediocre quality hay. It takes the same amount of energy via fossil fuels to harvest hay with poor quality as it does good quality hay.

Marketing involves being customer-oriented. It also means listening to buyers and understanding their needs. The drought situations the last couple of years have been a unique situation and many producers saw this as an opportunity to enter the hay market because low quality hay was valuable in such places. However, this will not be the circumstances in the long-term. If you want to be in the hay business, know what your market is, produce for it, and remember that repeat business is always important.

From Our Kitchen To Yours

Goodness from Grains

WHOLE WHEAT BUTTERMILK PANCAKES

2 cups white whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/3 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
2 1/2 cups buttermilk
2 large eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/2 teaspoon grated orange zest, optional
2 tablespoons melted butter

Whisk the dry ingredients together in a large bowl until well combined. In another bowl, whisk the eggs, and then whisk in the remaining wet ingredients. Gradually pour the wet ingredients over the dry ingredients as you stir them together until just combined. Do not over mix. Bring a skillet to a medium-high heat. Lightly butter the pan and pour 1/4 cup of batter into the pan, rolling it around a bit if you like your pancakes on the thinner side. Allow the edges to brown slightly and then flip to cook the other side.

TURKEY & BLUE CHEESE SALAD SANDWICH

12 ounces turkey, chopped
1/2 cup blue cheese, crumbled
1/2 cup light mayonnaise
1/2 cup celery, diced
1/2 cup red grapes, sliced into quarters
1/4 cup red onion, diced
1/4 cup pecans, toasted & chopped
3 tablespoons parsley, chopped
Sea salt & freshly ground black pepper to taste
A fresh loaf of rustic whole grain bread, thinly sliced

Mix prepared ingredients in a bowl. Cover and chill in the refrigerator. Serve over thinly sliced whole grain bread.

HONEY BUNCHES

3 cups quick oats
1/2 cup white whole wheat flour
1/2 cup finely ground flaxseed
1 cup coconut (shredded or flaked)
1 cup walnuts or pecans, chopped
1 1/2 cups brown sugar
1/3 cup honey or molasses
1 cup butter

Preheat oven to 325°. Combine oats, flour, flaxseed, coconut, and nuts in a large bowl. Melt butter, sugar, and honey in saucepan over low heat. Add melted butter mixture to dry ingredients and stir to combine. Fill mini muffin tins 3/4 full. Bake 9-12 minutes, until browned, and chewy.

TUSCAN PENNE PASTA SALAD

1 pound whole wheat penne
1/2 cup finely chopped sundried tomatoes
1 cup corn
1 cup peas
1/4 cup chopped scallions
1/3 cup fresh basil, slivered
1/4 cup olive oil
1/8 cup balsamic vinegar
1 clove of fresh garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
Fresh ground black pepper
1/2 cup finely shredded parmesan

Whisk together the olive oil, balsamic vinegar, fresh garlic, salt and pepper. Prepare the pasta al dente, according to the package instructions. If using frozen corn and peas, boil them for 3 minutes, and promptly transfer to cold water to preserve some crispness. Strain the pasta and add the corn, peas, scallions, sundried tomatoes, and the dressing; stir to combine well. Allow the pasta salad to cool before adding the basil and parmesan.

WHOLE GRAIN BANANA BREAD

1/3 cup unsalted butter, softened at room temperature
1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup packed natural brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 eggs
1 1/2 cups mashed over-ripe bananas
1 3/4 cups white whole wheat flour
1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 cup water
1/4 cup chopped walnuts
1/2 cup dark chocolate chips, preferably 60% cocoa

Preheat oven to 325°. Lightly grease a 9x5-inch loaf pan with butter. Combine flour, cinnamon, and salt in a bowl; whisk and set aside. In another large bowl, combine butter, honey, and sugar; beat for two minutes. Add the eggs and lightly beat until just combined. Mix in bananas and vanilla—do not over mix. Gradually beat in the flour mixture in thirds. Dilute baking soda in 1/4 cup hot (not boiling) water, and add to batter. Stir in, by hand, the chocolate chips and chopped nuts. Pour the batter into pan and bake for 52 minutes (test for doneness being careful not to over bake). Remove from pan and place on a wire rack to cool.

Using Ag Centers to Capture Tourism Revenue and Support Community Needs

By Rachael Carter & Judith Phillips
Stennis Institute of Government and Community Development

As county budgets shrink, many communities are struggling with decisions as to how to best fund, maintain, and utilize the agricultural centers in communities across Mississippi. The state of Mississippi has various publicly owned facilities that range in size from the Paul Battle Jr. Arena and Exposition Center in Tunica, Mississippi to outdoor arenas or riding rings found in rural areas across the state. The Stennis Institute of Government and Community Development was receiving calls to assist communities with multiple issues related to various agricultural centers, and rural tourism development. After a series of meetings, the Bolivar County Board of Supervisors and the Stennis Institute decided to form a partnership to address this important issue; the Stennis Institute Project Team (Judith Phillips and Rachael Carter), collaborated with Bricklee Miller the manager of the Mississippi Horse Park to seek funding from USDA Rural development, Rural Business Opportunities Grant to offset the cost to the Bolivar County Board of Supervisors for funding a project entitled "Protecting Public Investment, Revitalizing Mississippi's Agricultural Centers."

According to Rachael Carter, Director of Tourism and Natural Resource Policy at the Stennis Institute, "I was seeing more and more articles in the news concerning the management of agricultural centers around the state. Some looked like they might face closure, while others were dealing with disagreements over management issues." The Stennis Institute had received calls from multiple communities needing advice and assistance. These requests ranged from creating a new management plan, conducting feasibility studies, developing ideas to improve a fair, or addressing conflict resolution issues. "Fundamentally, the root of the problem was the same - communities want the facilities better utilized and able to generate revenue in the community, as well as to serve as a resource for the local people. That is a difficult balance to achieve." Mississippi's Agricultural Centers are frequently an underutilized avenue for tourism, agricultural growth, and community development in our state. Many agricultural facilities are struggling financially and organizations, while at the same time, the equine industry, the local foods movement, agricultural tourism and rural tourism are growing in Mississippi.

The Bolivar County Expo Center is a prototype for the revitalization of agricultural centers. The project will involve conducting a comprehensive market analysis of the region consisting of Bolivar, Coahoma, Sunflower, and Washington and counties. The project team will conduct an extensive feasibility study to increase the capacity utilization of the Bolivar County Expo Center, identify alternative sources of funding, and design a management and marketing plan for the facility in order to increase usage, tourism, and job growth in the region. The information gained during this process will then be used to start a statewide training program for all persons involved in managing and operating these facilities across the state.

The project entails gathering information on all possible avenues of growth for these facilities, including, but not limited to cultural tourism, music tourism, and agricultural tourism avenues. The tourism potential of the equine and the livestock industry are among the industries being examined. These two industries are important to the state, but very little information is available on how to increase the tourism potential of equine and livestock shows and sales. Agricultural centers, the equine industry, the livestock industry, and even county fairs are an often overlooked resource for the tourism sector and agri-tourism. This project will provide information to fill that void and help communities to more effectively use agricultural centers to generate tourism, revenues, and economic impact.

To address the existing information gap, Dallas Breen, a Senior Research Associate at the Stennis Institute developed surveys for the equine and livestock industries that are available online at Mississippi State University's Polling Center for Government and Business Development. Anyone involved in the equine industry is asked to visit the site <http://polling.stennisinstitute.org/equine> and anyone involved in the livestock industry is asked to click on <http://polling.stennisinstitute.org/livestock> to answer survey questions to help with the project. Nutrena Feed is conducting a coupon giveaway to survey participants.

The immediate priority of the project is to assist the Bolivar County Board of Supervisors to assess future investments and improvements to the Bolivar County Expo Center that have the potential to increase the utilization of the facility and to assure the effective and efficient use of public funds. A long-range objective is to assist other communities to capitalize on their agricultural centers as an economic resource to capture tourism dollars, foster agricultural and community development, increase employment and support small businesses, and increase the revenues associated with agricultural centers so they become an economic asset rather than a financial drain.

During the 1968 Regular Session of the Mississippi Legislature, House Bill 1330 authorized the Board of Supervisors of Bolivar County "to acquire land, construct agricultural and livestock show areas, barns, arenas, and other facilities necessary for the conduct of livestock shows and related activities within the county." The legislation authorized the supervisors to expend up to $200,000 from general funds or by the issuance of notes and bonds. Many other agricultural facilities were constructed after legislation passed in 1995 (SB3231) to enable the Mississippi Department of Agriculture "to provide grants to counties and municipalities to fund either construction, renovation, or expansion of livestock facilities." (1995). The local counties or municipalities were required under this program to provide matching funds.

School's Out for Summer

By Lise Foy

Director of Project Management
MS Agriculture & Forestry Museum

Do you remember that feeling? The last project is complete, the last test is taken, and the last text book is returned to the teacher. The clock must be ticking slower than usual. The suspense is almost too much. And there it is. The last bell of the school year finally rings. At least two months of unscheduled, barefoot fun waits outside. Out the door to summertime you go!

My two brothers and I had so much fun growing up on a farm in the Mississippi summer. We filled our days riding horses bareback, swimming in the ditch when it rained, flying homemade kites, fishing, and building 'stuff'. We roamed our 300 acre playground until dark or until we heard Daddy's whistle that meant it was time to come to the house. However, the summer break that we knew as kids of the 1980s was not always the custom for Mississippi youth.

School attendance was not a requirement in any state by law until 1852, when Massachusetts became the first state to institute such a policy. Others soon followed suit. From the late 1800s into the early 1900s, students in rural communities were needed to help with farm work during planting season in the spring and during harvest in the fall. Schools would let out during these times so the kids could provide added labor. Historians say that farm children went to school from December to March and from mid-May to August. The schools only had one room, sometimes two. They were not grouped together by age; they were grouped together by the book they were using, and they all worked on the same subject.

The two room school house at the Ag Museum is representative of a small town 1920s school. The artifacts, including desks, and original ink wells from that period were gathered from across the state during the development of the Museum. There was a ribbon cutting ceremony held on October 18, 1985, where children wore period dress with boys in overalls or knee pants and girls in stockings and dresses.

As the research for the school house at the Ag Museum was done, information concerning rules for teacher employment, punishment for misbehavior, lessons, and appropriate games from the era were collected.

Some rules from a list compiled in 1872 for teachers to follow included the following:

- Teachers each day will fill lamps, clean chimneys.
- Each teacher will bring a bucket of water and a scuttle of coal for the day's session.
- Make pens carefully. You may whittle the nibs to individual taste of pupils.
- Men teachers may take one evening each week for courting purposes or two evenings if they go to church regularly.
- After ten hours in school, the teacher may spend the remaining time reading the Bible or other good books.

• Women teachers who marry or engage in unseemly conduct will be dismissed.

• Every teacher should lay aside from each pay a goodly sum of his earnings for his benefit during his declining years so he will not become a burden on society.

• Any teacher who smokes, uses liquor in any form, frequents pool or public halls, or gets shaved in a barber shop will give good reason to suspect his worth, intention, integrity, and honesty.

Some of the things pupils could be reprimanded for included gambling or betting at school, nicknaming each other, swearing at school, making swings, and swinging on them, drinking spirituous liquors at school, coming to school with dirty faces, and hands and for wearing long fingernails.

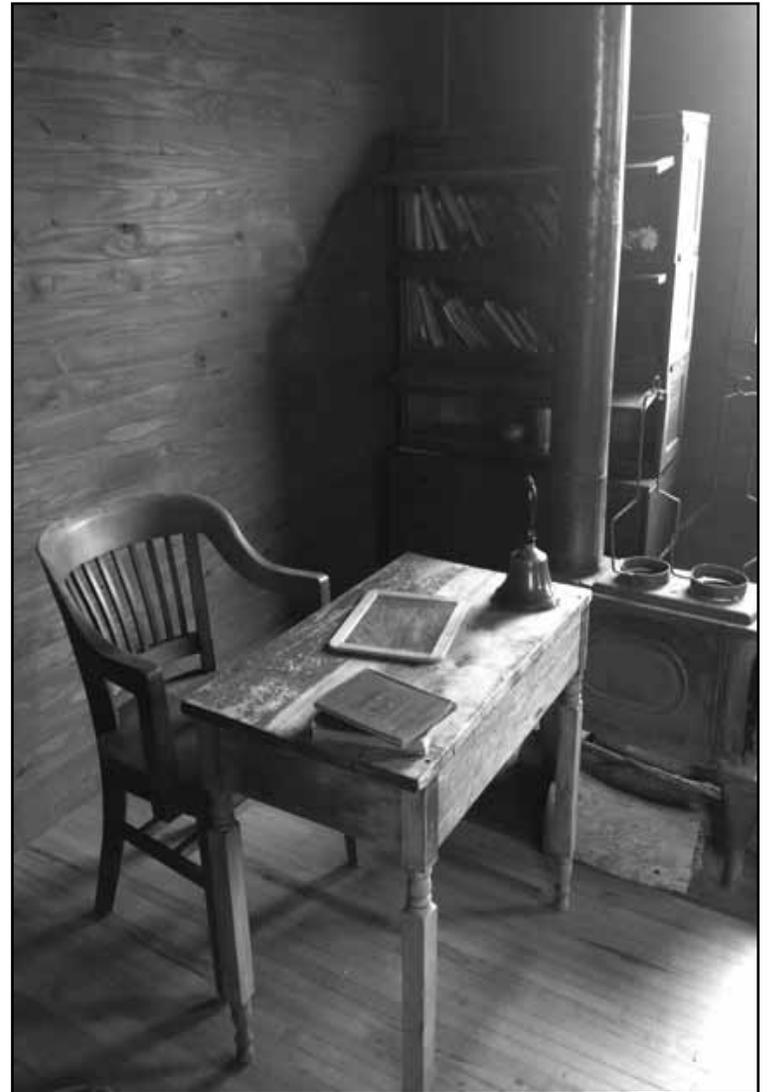

My favorite of the information in the files is the arithmetic lesson. Arithmetic was often called 'ciphering'. Most problems were put in practical terms. Problems were read aloud and students worked them out on their slates.

• If 12 horses eat up to 30 bushels of oats in a week, how many bushels will serve 36 horses the same length of time?

• Three partners, A, B, and C shipped several mules from the West Indies. A owned 48; B, 36; and C, 24. A total of how many mules were shipped?

• Two farmers bartered: A had 100 bushels of wheat, at $1.50 per bushel, for which B gave him 100 bushels of barley, worth $1.00 per bushel, and the balance in oats at $.50 per bushel. How many bushels of oats did A receive from B?

Obviously, there has been some evolution since this time, not only in lessons and rules, but also factors that have led to the modern American school year starting in September and ending in June. While one of the influences leading to this change is certainly the movement away from farming culture, there are other reasons that may have led to the schedule change.

In U.S. cities, where students were taught throughout the calendar year, some education experts and doctors of the day believed too much schooling placed stress on kids. Other reasons included the temperature during summer months. Today, we could adjust the thermostat, but this convenience was not readily available until the 1950s. Another factor that came into play was that families began to take summer vacations, and teachers needed a time set aside for training. So organizers of what came to influence our modern school year thought it best to strike summer from the academic calendar and to allow everyone, urban and rural, some time out of class.

Governor Phil Bryant signed into law his education reform package on April 17, 2013, saying it will help Mississippi move forward for many generations to come. "The changes enacted by this legislation will help the state create and retain the best teachers, create public charter schools of excellence that will give students in failing schools access to higher quality education, and create reading practices that will stop the exercise of social promotion," Bryant said, minutes before signing the legislation at Northwest Rankin High where his two children attended. The desk the Governor used to sign this ground breaking legislation is the teacher's desk on display in the school house at the Ag Museum. This historic ceremonial event will be added to the archives of that particular artifact.

The Ag Museum is located at 1150 Lakeland Drive in Jackson and is open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. For more information about the Ag Museum, call (601) 432-4500.

Certification, Pest Help Offered at May Field Day

By Susan Collins-Smith
MSU Ag Communications

Both traditional and organic farmers can learn how to recognize and control pests, weeds, and diseases during a May 17 field day.

Experts from the Mississippi State University Extension Service; the Mississippi Agricultural, Forestry and Experiment Station; and several partner organizations will be on hand at the Alliance for Sustainable Agricultural Production Demonstration Farm in Goodman to help producers learn to scout their crops and chose the best integrated pest, weed and disease management program.

Participants can get assistance with the following farm certification programs: the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Good Agricultural Practices and Good Handling Practices, USDA's National Organic Program, and Certified Naturally Grown.

Those who wish to certify their farms in these programs will receive detailed information and assistance with certification processes, forms, and models. Individuals interested in certification must indicate their interest when they preregister for the event.

Good Agricultural Practices and Good Handling Practices are voluntary audit programs designed to reduce the risk of food contamination on the farm. National Organic Program farmers who label their produce as organic must comply with NOP standards. Certified Naturally Grown is a non-profit organization through which small-scale, direct-market farmers, and beekeepers who use natural methods can certify their products.

This field day is the fifth in a series of monthly events scheduled for 2013. Sessions are scheduled for the third Friday of every month, January through November. The last field day is scheduled for December 13. More than 40 topics will be addressed, ranging from financial management to crop selection. All field days will be held from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

To register for the field day or for more information, contact Keith Benson at (601) 988-4999 or keithmdp@yahoo.com. The Alliance for Sustainable Agricultural Production Demonstration Farm is located at 1184 Coleman Road off of Highway 51 between Goodman and Durant.

Advertising Guidelines

The Mississippi Market Bulletin is published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The Mississippi Market Bulletin is an important way for the Department to disseminate news and information about issues affecting Mississippi's agriculture industry and the Department's operations.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Businesses, corporations, dealerships, brokers or other commercial enterprises are not allowed to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin.

Advertising rules and guidelines have been established for the Mississippi Market Bulletin in order to comply with regulations enforced by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce and to maintain the objectives of the publication. To place an ad, you must include your name, mailing address and account number that the subscription is listed under on each ad that you submit (this information will not be printed). Each subscriber is allowed to advertise two ads in the Bulletin, listing one ad per category.
- All listings must be agriculture related (raised, grown, produced or operated on your farm). At the top of your ad, write the category that the ad should be listed under. We reserve the right to edit, revise or reject each ad. Please print or type your ad.

Spring Rains Help Summer Crops, But More is Needed

By Bonnie Coblentz
MSU Ag Communications

Springtime's soggy fields are no guarantee that summer's row crops will have the moisture they need to thrive until harvest in the fall.

Jason Krutz, irrigation specialist with the Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station, said winter and spring rain helps recharge the soil profile, but moisture must be replenished during the growing season.

"In the Delta in the summer, we're always 10 days from a drought," Krutz said. "If you go 10 days without rain, your row crops are in trouble, and you will have to irrigate."

Water infiltrates or seeps into the soil when it falls as rain or irrigation. Scientists use the term "soil profile" to describe the ground layers. The rooting zone is the first 3 to 5 feet of this soil profile.

"We need winter rains to recharge the soil profile all through the rooting zone so that when the plant roots get there, the water is there," Krutz said.

Water is stored in soil in the space between soil particles. Krutz said about 50 percent of the soil profile is space that can be filled with water. Soils are described as saturated when water fills all the extra space.

"You can imagine soil like a sponge. Field capacity is when it is full of water but doesn't drip out," Krutz said.

Farmers try to plant when soils are at field capacity. Once plants emerge from seed, properly moist soil has sufficient supplies of water to sustain growth for a time. Solar radiation -- bright, sunny days -- wind, and heat also speed up water loss through evaporation.

"A small plant uses less water than one that has grown and is mature, and plants use less water on days that are not sunny and bright," Krutz said.

Ideally, crops planted on time into soil with moisture at field capacity should not need rain or irrigation until the plants reach reproductive stages, usually 30 to 50 days after emergence.

At peak water demand stages, which is typically when grain is filling out, Mississippi crops all require about a quarter of an inch of water a day.

"We want the lower part of the soil profile charged up with as much water as it can hold," Krutz said. "That way, we have a reservoir of water in the lower soil profile, keeping us from having to irrigate earlier than normal."

Larry Oldham, Extension soil specialist, said fields need a lot of rain or irrigation, but standing water is not good.

"This indicates a couple of not-too-good outcomes," Oldham said. "The field may have drainage issues, preventing excess water from moving away, or the soil is saturated, and there is no air in the soil for plants. This hurts germination and decreases the growth of most plants."

With the exception of rice, which requires a time of controlled flooding during its growth, Mississippi's row crops can survive from a few days to as much as a few weeks in standing water or saturated soils before damage is done.

"The characteristics of soil in a particular place determines how much runs off into a ditch, is absorbed into the soil or seeps through the soil profile and into groundwater," Oldham said.

Alpaca Farming, Gaining Popularity in Mississippi

By Claude Nash, Editor
Mississippi Market Bulletin

Drive anywhere in Mississippi and you will find all types of traditional livestock such as cattle, horses, goats, sheep, etc. But did you ever imagine seeing alpacas? Alpacas are rapidly gaining in popularity throughout the world and here in Mississippi as a livestock breeding animal.

Alpacas were exported from Peru in the mid-1980s and have become a premier livestock in North America and abroad. Alpacas are cousins to the llama and are beautiful, intelligent animals native to the Andean Mountain range of South America, particularly Peru, Bolivia, and Chile.

They look like small llamas or long-necked camels with no humps, especially when recently sheared. They have shaggy necks and camel-like faces with thick lips, pronounced noses, and long ears. Their large, expressive eyes seem to exhibit both wisdom and childlike curiosity. Easily domesticated, alpacas are friendly, gentle, and curious. They are alert, intelligent, curious, and predictable. Social animals that seek companionship, they communicate most commonly by softly humming.

Alpacas are used for meat, leather, and fiber. But within the United States, however, alpacas are solely used for their fiber material, fleece.

The hair of the alpaca is called 'fleece' or 'fiber' rather than 'fur' or 'wool.' It is a premium fiber and in high demand in the fashion industry. It is light-weight, warm, and durable, soft, and not itchy. Alpaca fiber is softer than cashmere or angora and warmer and lighter weight than wool without the prickle-factor of some wool. Since alpaca fleece has no lanolin, it is easier to process and is hypoallergenic.

Alpacas are sheared every twelve to eighteen months. They produced five to ten pounds of luxurious fiber. Long ago, alpaca fiber was reserved for royalty. Today, it is purchased in its raw fleece form by hand-spinners and fiber artists. Knitters buy it as yarn. It comes in 22 natural colors, yet can be dyed any desired shade.

The Alpaca Owners & Breeders Association (AOBA), headquartered in Nashville, TN, serves to facilitate the expansion of a strong and sustainable alpaca industry through the growth and development of the national herd and its products. Since AOBA's formation in 1988, its membership has grown steadily to more than 4,000 members with over 160,000 registered alpacas in North America.

If you would like more information about alpacas contact the AOBA at 1-800-213-9522 or www.AlpacaInfo.com.
