Catfish Producers Manage for Profit

By Linda Breazeale
MSU Ag Communications

Mississippi's catfish farmers continue to address production challenges as the industry works to reclaim markets lost to imported fish.

Jeremy Robbins, vice president of The Catfish Institute based in Jackson, said farmers have struggled in recent years with high feed prices, their No. 1 expense, while dealing with increased competition from imports.

"There is no denying the quality of our product. We have the safest, healthiest aquaculture product on the market," he said. "With current market conditions, we are working with all segments of our industry to develop new and innovative tools and marketing initiatives to drive sales. We are also working with state lawmakers across the South to ensure that consumers are informed at the final point of sale about where their catfish is grown."

Robbins said the industry has addressed foreign challenges by lobbying for country-of-origin labeling to ensure consumers are informed.

"Because of ongoing food safety concerns with imported catfish products, clear menu labeling has been one of The Catfish Institute's primary focuses in recent years. Given the choice, we believe consumers prefer American-grown catfish. We are hopeful these efforts will eliminate confusion and perhaps avoid a potential bad customer experience due to mislabeling," he said.

Robbins said to address high production costs, farmers are exploring different stocking densities, new pond layouts and oxygenation systems, and new ways to get feed costs down, such as using different catfish feed formulas.

Jimmy Avery, Extension professor at the MSU Delta Research and Extension Center in Stoneville and director of the Southern Regional Aquaculture Center, said the sluggish economy, high soybean and corn prices, and a flood of cheap foreign fish continue to hurt the catfish industry.

"We have seen some improvement in fish prices in recent months, but what that means is that farmers are only losing 15 cents per pound instead of 25 cents," he said.

Avery said U.S. farm-raised catfish were 90-95 cents per pound the first week of May compared to 80-85 cents per pound two months earlier. He said lower supplies finally may be helping prices. In early 2012, catfish were bringing about $1.25 per pound.

"The national industry is down from 182,000 acres of catfish ponds in 2003 to 83,000 acres now," he said. "What has hurt us the most is feed costs. Feed prices were as high as $590 per ton for feed in 2012, compared to $250 per ton several years ago."

An additional challenge this spring has been the persistent cool temperatures.

"Catfish growth is about six weeks behind this spring because when it's cooler, fish don't eat as much," he said. "These conditions have also delayed the start of hatchery season. The good news is that cooler temperatures also reduce disease outbreaks."

Avery said some producers are studying ways to redesign their ponds to increase production efficiency. One option gaining attention is to create a smaller containment area for the fish and a larger area for treating the water.

"This split-pond approach provides an algal growth basin of about 80 percent of the total area and a fish-holding area of the other 20 percent," Avery said. "The two components are connected to allow circulation between the water-treatment area and the fish-holding area."

Avery said hybrid catfish are usually stocked in these ponds because of their increased disease resistance and aggressive feeding behavior.

"The advantages of this system include more efficient aeration, ease of feeding and harvest, improved feed conversion, decreased predation, and greater fish production than traditional ponds," he said. "The cost of converting traditional ponds into split-ponds is high, so transition to this new system will be slow."

Avery said catfish producers always have looked for the most current recommendations to produce a quality product. The current economic challenges are just another factor to influence their management decisions.

Gone Fishin'

By Lise Foy, Director
MS Agriculture & Forestry Museum

During the hot summer months, there are many things that seem nostalgically Southern to me. There are sights and sounds at night fall that I love to sit in my porch rocker and enjoy, like the crickets, frogs, whippoorwills, and lightning bugs. There are plants like Crepe Myrtles and Magnolias that are decidedly Southern and fill the air with distinct fragrance. And there are activities that seem very Southern and meant for summer to me like enjoying the porch swing with a glass of tea in hand, running barefoot, and heading to a favorite fishing hole with your cane pole to catch a 'mess' of catfish for supper.

I can remember the first time I saw the water in the pond 'boil' when Papaw would feed the catfish. Then years later, when my husband and I were dating, it was a fun activity to feed the catfish in the pond behind his parents' house. Some people might think that was an odd courtship activity, but I thought it was great (and still do)!

The Channel Catfish is one of the oldest inhabitants of lakes, streams, and rivers in the Southern United States. Catfish became a major cash crop of the Mississippi Delta in the 1970s, and fried catfish is considered a quintessential southern dish. Once considered the "food of the poor," chefs around the country are now inventing new ways to cook and eat this fish. And, at just 140 calories per four ounce serving, it is a healthy choice that can be used in any recipe. Keep in mind that while the process of dredging in cornmeal and frying in oil might add a calorie or two, this versatile fish can be baked, broiled, grilled, and sautéed for a very healthy meal.

The new catfish exhibit at the Ag Museum installed in the spring of 2013, features information about the Mississippi catfish industry, the lifecycle of the fish and nutritional facts about the product. The video guides visitors through the process of farm raised catfish and features enticing images of fillets prepared in different methods by local restaurants, and visitors can also view live fish in the tank at the center of the exhibit. The exhibit is sponsored by The Catfish Institute.

Mississippi farm-raised catfish is a very high quality product. From egg to harvest, these fish receive special treatment. The pond water is constantly tested to ensure the proper environment for the fish. They are fed a diet of high protein pellets made from clean and safe ingredients and harvested at 1.5 to 2 pounds delivered straight from the pond to the processing plant. The fillets are on ice and ready to ship within 30 minutes.

In 2012, catfish ranked seventh on the list of Mississippi produced commodities, a $165 million industry for our state.

A few interesting facts about the Catfish:

- They are nocturnal.
- They taste their food with their whiskers which are actually called barbels.
- They have skin instead of scales.
- The Catfish Capitol of the World, Belzoni, Mississippi, hosts the Annual World Catfish Festival named in the Top 100 Events in North America.

- In the wild, the male fish care for the eggs until they hatch.
- One catfish can lay up to 4,000 eggs a year per pound of body weight.
- Approximately 80% of the nation's farm-raised catfish is raised in Mississippi.

Since July is Catfish month, it seems quite appropriate to me as we go about our summer picnics, reunions, and homecoming events where we eat loads of catfish, coleslaw, hushpuppies, french fries, and gallons of sweet tea. Thanks to our excellent catfish farmers, high quality catfish is available year-round, but that menu just goes with summer time, don't you think?

The Ag Museum is located at 1150 Lakeland Drive in Jackson and is open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. In addition to our gallery and exhibit spaces, the Ag Museum also has room for your event, whether it's a meeting, a wedding, or other special event. ## Advertising Guidelines

The Mississippi Market Bulletin is published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The Mississippi Market Bulletin is an important way for the Department to disseminate news and information about issues affecting Mississippi's agriculture industry and the Department's operations.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Businesses, corporations, dealerships, brokers or other commercial enterprises are not allowed to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin.

Advertising rules and guidelines have been established for the Mississippi Market Bulletin in order to comply with regulations enforced by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce and to maintain the objectives of the publication. The staff of the Mississippi Market Bulletin reserves the right to edit, revise or reject any advertisement.

The Mississippi Market Bulletin assumes no responsibility for any notice appearing in the Bulletin nor for any transaction resulting from published notices. Advertisers are cautioned that it is against the law to misrepresent any product offered for sale in public notices or advertisements carried in any publication that is delivered by the United States Postal Service.

- In order to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin you must be a subscriber. To place an ad, you must include your name, mailing address and account number that the subscription is listed under on each ad that you submit (this information will not be printed). Each subscriber is allowed to advertise two ads in the Bulletin, listing one ad per category.
- All listings must be agriculture related (raised, grown, produced or operated on your farm). At the top of your ad, write the category that the ad should be listed under. We reserve the right to edit, revise or reject each ad. Please print or type your ad.
- There is a 30-word limit for classified advertisements, this includes: price (on the item you are selling), your city, county and telephone number or name and complete address must be included in the ad if you do not list a telephone number. Ads cannot be held over from one issue to another. You must submit them for each issue.
- Out-of-state residents are not eligible to advertise with the following exceptions: Out-of-state ads are allowed in the "Wanting To Buy" category. Out-of-state ads are allowed for individuals owning farm property within the state that is being offered for sale (consisting of 10 acres or more).

NCAT Opens Gulf States Office in Jackson, MS

By Jim Ewing
Outreach Coordinator, NCAT

The National Center for Appropriate Technology (NCAT) is pleased to announce the opening of a Gulf States Region office in Jackson, Mississippi.

"Recognizing a great need for services in the Gulf States, we launched this new office to provide assistance and information specifically targeted to the agriculture producers in this region," said Kathy Hadley, NCAT executive director.

States that will be served by this new office include Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, and Mississippi. Thanks to board member Beneta Burt, our staff will be located at the Jackson Medical Mall in the Mississippi Roadmap to Health Equity facility at 2458 Livingston Road, Jackson, MS 39213. The phone number is (479) 575-1385 or call toll free: 1-866-643-2767.

New director for this office is Rockiell Woods. Woods served as the regional extension coordinator serving the Mississippi Delta for Alcorn State University prior to joining NCAT. He holds a bachelor of science degree in agribusiness management and a masters degree in agriculture economics from Alcorn State.

Rockiell Woods, NCAT Director.

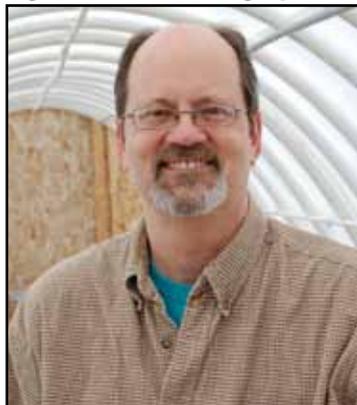

Also joining the NCAT team in the new office are Felicia Bell and Jim Ewing. Bell will serve as an agriculture specialist for the region. She is a co-owner and operator of the RD&S Farm in Rankin County, which features natural livestock production and certified organic produce. Felicia also serves as state chairwoman of the Mississippi chapter of the National Women in Agriculture Association.

Felicia Bell, NCAT Agriculture Specialist

Ewing will be the new outreach specialist for the Jackson office. He had worked as a writer and editor for The Clarion-Ledger, Mississippi's largest newspaper, before joining NCAT. He is the former president of the Mississippi Fruit & Vegetable Growers Association and writer on organic food and farming topics.

Jim Ewing, NCAT Outreach Specialist

NCAT, headquartered in Butte, Montana, is a non-profit organization offering assistance for sustainable living — farming, energy, and information — to reduce poverty, promote healthy communities, and protect natural resources.

NCAT's mission is helping people by championing small-scale, local, and sustainable solutions to reduce poverty, promote healthy communities, and protect natural resources. Since 1976, it has been serving economically disadvantaged people by providing information and access to appropriate technologies that can help improve their lives.

With NCAT's ATTRA program - the National Sustainable Agriculture Information Service - farmers and ranchers can call in toll free for information about sustainable agriculture. NCAT has specialists who will answer questions, for free. Call 1-800-346-9140; or en Espanol, 1-800-411-3222.

"We invite Gulf State farmers and ranchers to call," said Woods. "Their questions will be referred to trained specialists in topics ranging from goats to sheep to cattle grazing to specific issues in sustainable row crop farming such as dealing with insect pests and best growing practices."

Funded in 1987 by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the ATTRA project serves farmers, ranchers, Cooperative Extension agents, and others interested in reducing chemical inputs, conserving soils and water, and/or diversifying their agriculture operations.

The Gulf States office will also be offering workshops, promoting local farm demonstration projects, and funding innovative programs to meet local needs, especially in serving economically distressed and underserved communities.

"Our phones are now open in Mississippi to help farmers and ranchers with their needs," said Woods. "We are excited to be able to now offer programs and services in the Gulf States."
