Soybean Potential Drives Prices Down

By Linda Breazeale
MSU Ag Communications

The spring's planting challenges and last year's Midwest drought boosted soybean prices for a while, but the winds of change are starting to blow.

Brian Williams, agricultural economist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said the soybean market had been strong until mid-July. The market typically drops before harvest, but he said prices dropped a bit faster this year.

"Soybean prices tumbled recently because the national crop is looking so much better than last year," he said. "The majority of the crop in Mississippi and nationally -- about 63 percent -- is listed as good or excellent."

Williams said growers, especially those in the Midwest, have been selling stored soybeans and other grains in advance of harvest, sending the market down more as supplies remain strong.

"Even with the drought last year, we had a better-than-expected crop once soybean harvest started," he said. "The yield potential for this year's crop is still uncertain. The next few weeks will be critical."

The August contract prices were around $13.75 per bushel. Although that was below last year's prices of $16.50 to $17 per bushel, it remains above the five-year average of about $12.84.

"As prices have been strong, the cost of production has also increased in recent years," Williams said. "Even with prices falling back, this remains a profitable crop."

Extension soybean specialist Trent Irby said many fields had to be replanted last spring as excessive rains and cooler temperatures complicated the early season. Despite those challenges, the 2013 crop looks good, especially in irrigated fields.

"Counties in the east-central part of the state saw some timely rains during July," he said. "Showers across the rest of the state have been scattered with many farmers relying on irrigation."

Irby said the crop remains about three weeks behind normal.

"Usually, the majority of the state's crop would be setting pods by August 1, but only about 50 percent of the acreage is at that point now," he said. "Over the years, our growers have seen many benefits from planting early. Typically, the stresses from insects and diseases are not as severe with early plantings. Conditions just didn't allow us to get the crop started as early this year."

Irby said that up to this point, insect and disease pressures have been relatively light, but those issues are picking up -- also later than normal.

"An increase in disease pressure will likely depend on the weather in the upcoming weeks. The impact that a disease has on soybean yield can depend on environmental conditions as well as the stage of the crop," he said. "Our pathologists are watching closely for soybean rust as well as other diseases. So far, five counties in the southern part of the state are reporting cases of soybean rust in sentinel plots. Growers need to continue to watch closely for these issues, particularly with such a late crop."

Insect issues also need to be monitored closely as the crop approaches maturity.

Extension entomologist Angus Catchot said kudzu bugs, which arrived in the state in 2012, are presenting additional challenges for soybeans. Growers may have another year before populations warrant treatments.

"We're up to 17 Mississippi counties with kudzu bugs, seven of those with them in soybean fields," Catchot said. "They made a big move this year but haven't yet reached treatable levels in soybeans. I feel certain that we'll be treating a few soybean fields next year."

Catchot said the highest kudzu bug numbers are found around Warren County and in southwest Mississippi.

HARVEST PERMITS

As we enter the harvest season for many different crops, the Mississippi Department of Transportation (MDOT) reminds everyone to have their Harvest Permits for hauling agricultural products.

Harvest Permits entitle a vehicle to haul sand, gravel, fill dirt, agricultural products, or unprocessed forestry products at an authorized maximum gross weight NOT to exceed 84,000 pounds.

The permits are not valid on Interstate Highways or low weight roads. Any vehicle weighed in excess of 80,000 pounds on an Interstate Highway will be penalized $0.05 per pound for all weight in excess of 80,000 and $0.15 per pound for all weight in excess of 100,000 pounds. The cost for a Harvest Permit is $25.

For more information on Harvest Permits contact MDOT at 1-800-844-9309 or www.gomdot.com

SOYBEAN, RICE, AND LENTIL SALAD

- 15 ounces whole soybeans, drained and rinsed
- 1 cup brown rice, cooked
- 1 cup canned kidney beans, drained and rinsed
- 1/2 cup canned lentils, drained and rinsed
- 1/4 cup lite honey mustard salad dressing
- 1/8 cup red onion, chopped
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 4 cups red leaf lettuce, torn

Combine all ingredients, except the lettuce, in a large bowl. Allow mixture to set at room temperature for 30 minutes; serve over lettuce.

CURRY SPICED SOY NUTS WITH TROPICAL FRUITS

- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup brown sugar, packed
- 3 tablespoons curry powder
- 3 tablespoons black sesame seeds, toasted
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 cups soynuts, dry-roasted, unsalted
- 3 tablespoons brown rice syrup
- 4 cups dried tropical fruits, diced

Preheat oven to 300° F. Blend the first 5 ingredients in a small bowl. Microwave soynuts and brown rice syrup on high in a medium microwave-safe bowl for 30 seconds; stir until coated. Sprinkle sugar mixture over soynuts; stir until coated. Spread on a foil-lined baking sheet. Bake 15 to 20 minutes, stirring once, until toasted.

CREAMY PUMPKIN CURRY SOUP

- 1 tablespoon soybean oil
- 1 small onion, diced
- 1 16-ounce package Silken tofu
- 1 15-ounce can pumpkin puree
- 1 medium apple, peeled, cored and sliced
- 2 cups low sodium vegetable or chicken broth
- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- 3/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup toasted pumpkin seeds (optional)

Heat soybean oil in medium saucepan over medium heat. Add onions and cook for 2 to 3 minutes until soft. Place onions, tofu, pumpkin, apple, broth, curry powder, pepper and salt in blender. Puree for 1 minute until smooth. Return mixture to saucepan. Heat over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until soup begins to gently simmer. Do not boil. Ladle into bowls; top with pumpkin seeds, if desired.

SOY CORNBREAD

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup cornmeal
- 1/2 cup soy flour
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup plain soymilk
- 1/4 cup soy oil
- 1 egg

Preheat oven to 425°. Coat a 9x9-inch pan with cooking spray. Stir together the all-purpose flour, cornmeal, soy flour, sugar, baking powder, and salt in a large mixing bowl; set aside. Whisk together the soymilk, oil, and egg in a small bowl. Add the liquid ingredients to the dry ingredients and stir until just moistened. Pour the batter into the prepared pan. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes, or until lightly browned and a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean.

CHOCOLATE SOY PANCAKES

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 2 tablespoons soy protein powder, plain or vanilla
- 3/4 cup cocoa powder
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 3 large eggs
- 3 tablespoons melted, unsalted butter or canola oil
- 1 1/2 cups soy milk, plain or vanilla

Sift the flour, soy protein powder, and cocoa into a medium bowl. Mix in the sugar, baking powder, and salt. In another bowl, lightly beat the eggs. Mix in the butter or oil, and the soy milk until well combined. Mix the wet ingredients into the dry mixture until they are just blended. The mixture will be slightly lumpy and have the consistency of cake batter. Spray a cast iron skillet with non-stick cooking spray or use a non-stick pan. Place the pan over medium-high heat. Ladle the batter by scant quarter cups into the pan. Cook until bubbles form on the surface and the edges darken, about 2 minutes. Turn and continue cooking until the pancake resists lightly when gently pressed in the center with your finger, about 2 minutes. Repeat until all the batter is used, keeping the cooked pancakes warm and covered in a low temperature oven until all of the pancakes are ready to be served.

The Aviator - The Ag One

By Lise Foy, Director
MS Agriculture & Forestry Museum

Do you know what the first pest was that anyone tried to control by aerial application of pesticide? If you are thinking it was old Mr. Boll Weevil, think again. And to shock you further, it did not start in the Delta Region of Mississippi, Arkansas, or Louisiana. Aerial application began in Ohio.

Aviation was in its infancy in 1921 and centered primarily on the military. While it had played an integral part in World War I, it was largely a novelty to civilians.

On August 31, 1921, Lt. John A. Macready bolted a crude metal hopper to the fuselage of a Curtiss JN-6H (Jenny) aircraft, loaded it with powdered lead arsenic, and took off from an airfield near Dayton, Ohio. He headed to a grove infested with the Catalpa sphinx moth and, as a crowd of spectators cheered, delivered the first load in the history of crop dusting. He reported immediate success – a 100 percent kill rate.

A year later in Louisiana, Delta Laboratory became the center for the design, construction, and testing of airborne dusting equipment. Hundreds of test flights, dusting on both sides of the Mississippi River, were made in hope that such action would thwart the boll weevil.

Today the agricultural aviation industry is made up of small businesses and pilots that use aircraft to aid farmers in producing a safe, affordable, and abundant supply of food, fiber, and bio-fuel, in addition to protecting forestry and controlling health-threatening pests.

The 'crop dusting' industry has gotten recent world-wide attention thanks to Disney's Planes. The National Agricultural Aviation Association (NAAA), which works to promote the benefits of aerial application to the public and conducts programs and services to ensure the continued success of the industry, played a part in ensuring that the lead character, Dusty, was positively portrayed in the film.

According to the cover story in the July/August issue of Agricultural Aviation magazine, the film makers did their research on details of the industry and the equipment used including the many details like ensuring the sound effects used for the correct type of engine, turbine - not piston, were accurate. Disney studios even went so far as hiring Texas-based aerial applicator Rusty Lindeman to play the role of Dusty Crophopper in select air shows across the country this year.

The Ag Museum houses the National Agricultural Aviation Museum, which provides a fascinating look at an industry that literally reshaped the history of agriculture. On display are actual planes that once flew over Southern farms and plantations.

Also on display are photos of the members of the National Agricultural Aviation Hall of Fame. Three Mississippians are members – Jesse Orval Cockery, who established one of the nation's first commercial firms for agricultural aviation in Clarksdale in 1933, and brothers, Aubrey and Jimmy Finkle, who founded and operated Finkle Brothers Dusting Service of Leland during the 1920s.

A favorite of Museum visitors is the Stearman A75 two-seat biplane which served as the cornerstone of the industry in its beginning. Built primarily by Boeing for the Army Air Service during World War II, the aircraft was easily adapted to accommodate dusting and spraying equipment. Disney's character, Leadbottom, is patterned after a Stearman biplane. The Museum's aviation gallery also includes a Piper J3 built in 1946, a Piper Pawnee, and an Grumman Ag Cat.

Today's pilots fly with highly specialized satellite navigation systems and the list of 'ships' used to get the job done include not only airplanes, but helicopters depending on the specific needs of the job.

It took a brave (or maybe just a little crazy?) person to attempt that first flight in 1921. The low, slow and tight turns required to accomplish the job take special skill and nerve. We should be thankful Mr. Macready took the chance because this group of individuals are helping to feed the millions of people in our country. And, I am proud to say I am married to one of them!

The Ag Museum is located at 1150 Lakeland Drive in Jackson and is open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. In addition to our gallery and exhibit spaces, the Ag Museum also has room for your event, whether it's a meeting, a wedding, or other special event. Ann Fox is one of ten outstanding quilters in Mississippi with quilts on display at the Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Museum through October 2013. Ann is shown with a display of miniature quilts that will be featured in a silent auction during the Greater Jackson Quilt Celebration on September 6, 7, and 8, 2013, at the Mississippi Craft Center on Rice Road in Ridgeland. As one of the oldest commodities in the state, cotton has played a huge role in Mississippi agriculture. The Ag Museum is honored to be the temporary home of the second oldest cotton bale in the world, grown in Jones County in 1884. The cotton was grown by William 'Pet' Welborn without using farm implements or fertilizer and was ginned the same year by Mat Moss in SoSo, MS. The cotton bale has remained in the Welborn family since 1884, and has been displayed at the museum since 1987. It is on loan from Walter Welborn of Laurel, MS, and is on exhibit in the Heritage Center gallery.

Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum Showcases New Erosion Control Demonstration Project

By Paige Manning
Director of Marketing and Public Relations - MDAC

Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce Cindy Hyde-Smith and United States Department of Agriculture-Natural Resources Conservation Service (USDA-NRCS) Acting State Conservationist Kevin Kennedy showcased a new erosion control demonstration project on the grounds of the Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum. The project, a partnership between the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce and the USDA-NRCS, addresses erosion problems that were occurring on the Museum grounds while creating demonstration areas for the public.

Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce Cindy Hyde-Smith stated, "We appreciate the financial and the technical assistance provided by USDA-NRCS. What makes this project so great is that it not only helped the Museum to address the erosion problems on the grounds, but it also serves as a teaching tool for the public. The practices that were used in this project can be utilized by others who may have the same problems."

The project was implemented to address erosion problems that were occurring along two streams on the Museum grounds as well as to serve as demonstration areas for erosion control practices that can be used in urban areas. The occurring problems were largely the result of storm water run-off from impervious areas such as parking lots and building roofs. Four demonstration areas were selected to install storm water run-off control structures including berms, drop pipes, and rock check dams to prevent erosion and stabilize the banks of the streams. Project design and funding were provided by the USDA-NRCS and was matched by in-kind services of the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce.

"NRCS is proud to be a partner with the Mississippi Department of Agriculture in this erosion control project to increase water quality," stated Kevin Kennedy, Acting NRCS State Conservationist. David Brunson, Area Conservationist for Central Mississippi, added, "These grade stabilization structures are just like ones that we install on landowner farms to increase water quality by keeping the sediment in the fields and out of the streams and rivers."

The Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Museum, which features the National Agricultural Aviation Museum, portrays the important role that the agriculture and forestry industries have played in Mississippi's history and how these industries have shaped Mississippi's economy through the years through both indoor and outdoor exhibits. The Museum, located at 1150 Lakeland Drive in Jackson, is open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. For more information about the Museum, call (601) 432-4500, visit www.msagmuseum.org, or visit the Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum on Facebook.

Tynes, USDA-NRCS; Kurt Readus, USDA-NRCS; David Brunson, USDA-NRCS; Barry Willis, Wilco Construction; Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce Cindy Hyde-Smith; Don Phillips, Chairman of the Agriculture and Forestry Museum Foundation Board; Sandy Havard, Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum; Jack Winstead, MDAC; Acting State Conservationist Kevin Kennedy, USDA-NRCS; and Michael Lasseter, MDAC.

Pastures, Forages Face New Battles

By Linda Breazeale
MSU Ag Communications

Forage producers and their livestock are not the only ones admiring the plentiful bermudagrass fields and pastures across the state this year.

Another invasive insect has arrived in Mississippi, this time to take a bite out of potentially strong hay yields. Stem maggots are joining the list of invasive species in the state that includes fire ants, fall armyworms, kudzu bugs, and once upon a time, boll weevils.

Blake Layton, entomologist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said stem maggots probably arrived in 2011, one year after they were first detected in Georgia. The first year Mississippi entomologists documented their activity throughout the state was in 2012. The mature flies are similar to horn flies in size and shape, and they have yellow abdomens.

"They kill the last two leaves growing out of the shoot on bermudagrass," he said. "Once the late fall arrives, they can kill side shoots too. Grass looks like it has had a frost."

Layton said hay producers will not want to spray for these new invaders because control will require two treatments and will not be cost-effective.

"Most producers will go ahead and cut the grass or hay when the populations reach damaging levels," he said. "They are not nearly as damaging as fall armyworms, which growers do control with insecticide treatments."

Layton said the state has had minimal fall armyworm activity this year.

"While their numbers have been lighter than normal so far, there is still plenty of time for populations to increase," he said. "The good news is we have a lot of effective, affordable insecticides to control them."

Rocky Lemus, Extension forage specialist, said some fertility research in Starkville shows more stem maggot damage on plots that received higher nitrogen amounts compared with lower rates or no applications. Once the damage is done, the grass stops growing, making harvest the logical option.

Lemus said frequent rains have helped grasses grow, but the extra moisture has also contributed to increased disease pressure in recent weeks.

"Bermudagrass hay fields also are being heavily infested with leaf-spot disease," he said. "Ideal conditions for leaf spot include moderate to cool temperatures and abundant moisture. Damage is usually more severe on stressed grass."

Conditions that appear to increase susceptibility include soil compaction, heavy thatch, nitrogen and potassium imbalances, and water stress like drought or excessive water.

"Fungicides are not an option for use on forage grasses," he said. "One way to reduce disease pressure is burning infected biomass, cutting it for hay, or grazing it. Leaf spot has also made fields susceptible to damage from the stem maggot as well."

Lemus said maintaining soil fertility might be the best option to preserve plant health.

"Livestock producers are having a good fall with plenty of grass in pastures as well as excellent conditions for hay production," he said. "That removes a lot of the worries as winter approaches."

John Michael Riley, Extension agricultural economist, said hay prices have been stable for the past few years, even with the vast drought that encompassed so much of the U.S. last year.

"Hay movement typically covers short distances, and Mississippi producers, for the most part, had a good crop last year," he said. "Hay that was sent to drought-stricken areas most likely brought a premium."
