State's Cotton Remains Late but Looking Good

By Bonnie Coblenz
MSU Ag Communications

Mississippi's cotton growers are hoping weather challenges don't prevent their late-planted crop from making the good yields it seems capable of producing.

Darrin Dodds, state cotton specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said the bulk of the crop was in pretty decent shape by late August.

"Some folks feel they are sitting on one of the better crops they've had," he said. "All that will boil down to the weather we have in the fall. We need a long, favorable fall and the heat to stick with us and the rain to stay away."

The August 18 Crop Progress and Condition Report from the U.S. Department of Agriculture estimated 66 percent of the crop was in good to excellent condition. Only 7 percent was determined to be in very poor or poor condition.

"Our biggest challenge was getting the crop planted," Dodds said.

By late August, usually 16 percent of the crop has open bolls. Dodds said he has seen some cotton bolls beginning to open near Rolling Fork in the south Delta and Macon in east Mississippi, but most of the state's cotton still has two to three weeks before bolls open.

Late boll opening does not necessarily mean a poor crop.

"It typically takes 50 to 60 days from a white flower to a mature boll. Research has shown that the last effective date for a bloom in the state passed August 22, which means cotton that flowers from here on out does not have a realistic chance of maturing into harvestable bolls," Dodds said.

Cotton is a heat-loving plant, and early August offered many hot days where cotton plants accumulated the heat units needed to produce a crop. Temperatures dipped in the middle of the month, slowing cotton maturity.

"The weather warming up has certainly helped," Dodds said. "We're no longer falling behind on the number of heat units we should be accumulating on average each day."

Charlie Stokes, Extension agent in Monroe County, said the biggest worry of cotton growers in east Mississippi is that they are running out of time.

"That's the biggest challenge I see," he said. "It's a late crop, and growers are worried about cooler days and cloudy mornings without a lot of heat units, but there's potential for a good crop if we have a warmer, drier fall."

Stokes said the crop grew well after it was finally planted in late May or early June. Producers have had to use several applications of growth regulator to keep it in check.

"That usually means you have a pretty good crop," Stokes said. "The cotton has set a good boll load, and it hasn't had a lot of fruit shed."

Thrips numbers in the Delta forced many growers to make additional insecticide sprays, but there have been no other significant problems with the crop beyond the late planting.

Dodds said when the poor yields of 2009 are taken out of consideration, the state's cotton fields have yielded about two bales per acre on average for the past five years.

"I don't see any reasons we won't average that again this year if we get good fall weather," he said.

Good yields could be matched by good prices this fall, if things continue to go well.

John Michael Riley, Extension agricultural economist, said the December futures price for cotton was 84 cents a pound on August 22, above the contract's final price last year of 72 cents a pound.

"A drop earlier this week was largely due to outside markets and rainfall in the southwestern U.S. in reference to late August," he said. "Prior to this, prices were moving higher, topping out just over 93 cents on August 16, following the most recent USDA supply and demand report, which showed an expected decline in U.S. production and projected smaller carry-over here in the U.S. and globally."

Riley said the fact that the cotton crop was planted late and is maturing late has had little impact on cotton markets in recent weeks.

"Attention has turned to how the crop is doing in the fields," he said. "The market is largely paying attention to drought conditions in west Texas, what China is doing with their reserves and what the general economy is doing."

Charmayne James Barrel Racing Clinic October 24-27

By Cotton Yancey
Rankin County Multi-Purpose Pavilion

Charmayne James, 11 time World Champion Barrel Racer in the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association and the Women's Professional Rodeo Association (WPRA) will be back in Brandon, MS at the Rankin County Multi-Purpose Pavilion Thursday-Sunday, October 24-27, 2013, for the "Charmayne James Barrel Racing Clinic."

After a very successful clinic in Rankin County in October of 2012, Charmayne has scheduled another opportunity for barrel racers from all over the country to come to Brandon for an expanded four day clinic. She will share her vast knowledge of horsemanship and barrel racing to participants of all ages and levels of expertise.

Charmayne's record speaks for itself. In 1984, at the young age of 14, she joined the WPRA and earned her first title as World Champion Barrel Racer. It was a title she continued to hold for the next ten consecutive years. Each of these ten titles was achieved on the same horse, the legendary "Scamper." She earned National Finals Rodeo Qualifications for 19 consecutive years and was NFR Average Champ 7 times. She was inducted into the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame in Fort Worth, TX in 1992 and won her 11th World Champion Title in 2002. Charmayne conducts barrel racing clinics nationwide that are booked years in advance.

Don't miss out on another chance to benefit from all of Charmayne's years of experience in and out of the arena. Register today at www.charmayne-james11.com or call Diana Shackelford at (972) 415-6074.

Bringing world class champions like Charmayne James is only part of the ongoing goal to establish quality annual events like this at the Rankin County Multi-Purpose Pavilion. We are blessed to have a history of having great producers producing a variety of great events through the years such as 4-H Livestock Shows, High School

Thanks to all who consider the Rankin County Multi-Purpose Pavilion for their next event.

Cockleburs in My Hair

By Lise Foy, Director
MS Agriculture & Forestry Museum

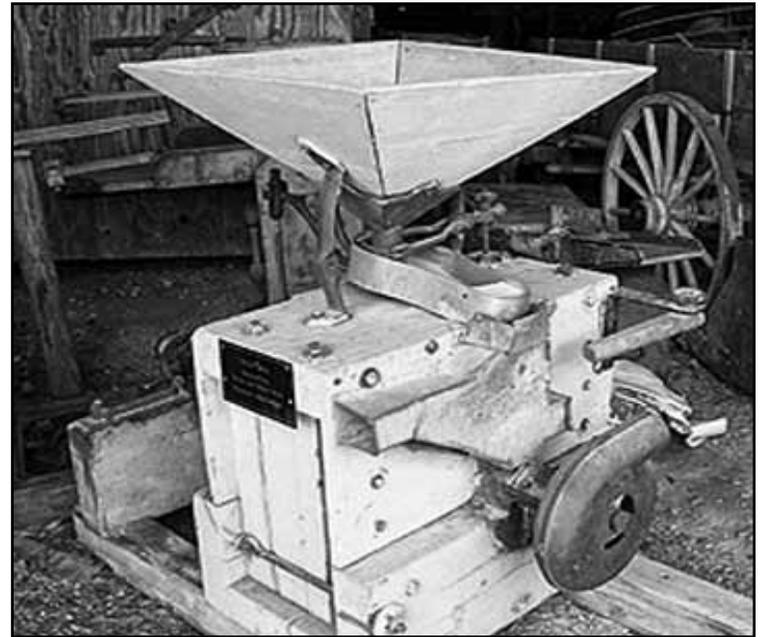

The color of the sky is beginning to turn that darker blue color signaling that Fall is coming. Kids are back in school, football season has started, and its time to cut the corn in the field.

As I watched the corn being harvested around my house this year, it made me think of the year I started school with shorter hair. Daddy used to grow a small crop to feed cows and make corn meal for cornbread. He used a harvester pulled behind a tractor that dropped the ears of corn into a wagon. My brothers and I would ride in the wagon sometimes. The particular incident I recall involved a 'wad' of cockleburs that found its way into the wagon, and my oldest brother thought he should throw it at my hair, which in turn, resulted in a new hair style for me.

Corn is the fourth largest agricultural commodity in Mississippi today with 121,680,000 bushels produced in 2012. It is a $891 million industry. Most of the corn you see growing in the fields across Mississippi is field corn that is used for feeding animals and in ethanol production, as opposed to sweet corn you can purchase at your local farmers market in mid-summer months.

There are several artifacts that relate to corn at the Ag Museum including a grist mill and hand cranked corn shellers located in the Small Town exhibit which is representative of life in 1920s Mississippi. Many towns had their own mill so that local farmers could easily transport their grain there to be milled. These communities were dependent on their local mill as bread was a staple part of the diet. The gristmill I remember as a child was located just outside of town and owned and operated by a gentleman who would take the corn we had shelled and return it to us as corn meal in small paper bags. It made the best cornbread ever! We even had our own Bethlehem Farms cornbread recipe attached to the bag.

Grist mills could have been operated by water power, animal power, or mechanization such as an engine like those that will be on display during the Hit and Miss Engine Show organized by the Dixieland Old Engine Club at the Ag Museum on September 13th and 14th, including antique flywheel engines, antique cars and antique tractors. Visitors can also take advantage of an opportunity to see a gristmill in operation during the annual Harvest Festival November 5th through 9th.

Corn is cholesterol free. It's a good source of Vitamin C, Vitamin A, potassium, thiamine, fiber, and is very high in antioxidants. Aside from its nutritional value, corn is something of a wonder crop. Not only can we eat it, we can manufacture consumer products with it, use it in concocting medicines, and even wear it. Things made with components from corn include paper products, rubber tires, toothpaste, spark plugs, cosmetics, drywall, beer, and disposable diapers (see more at: <http://www.agricorner.com>).

The absorbent layer found in modern-day diapers is typically made with acrylic acid, which is a derivative of corn, and you also find traditional cornstarch used in diaper production. Baby powder, an item which is often used along with diapers, also typically contains cornstarch thanks to its absorbent nature. I am really thankful for corn and its role in the invention of the disposable diaper. Since the birth of my twins on July 22, we are doing our part to support the corn industry!

I anticipate the cockleburs my girls are likely to throw at each other in their Papaw's corn field in the not too distant future. Is there a better remedy for removal of cockleburs from long hair than scissors?

Bethlehem Farms Cornbread

1/2 cup yellow cornmeal
1/2 cup plain flour
1 1/2 tsp baking powder
1/2 tsp salt
1 egg
Milk
2 Tbs Vegetable oil

Add vegetable oil to cast iron skillet and place in oven. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Mix dry ingredients together. Add the egg and stir. Add milk (batter should be thin enough to pour into skillet). Pour oil from skillet into batter and stir in. Pour batter into skillet and bake until golden brown on top.

The Ag Museum is located at 1150 Lakeland Drive in Jackson and is open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. In addition to our gallery and exhibit spaces, the Ag Museum also has room for your event, whether it's a meeting, a wedding, or other special event. ## Advertising Guidelines

The Mississippi Market Bulletin is published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The Mississippi Market Bulletin is an important way for the Department to disseminate news and information about issues affecting Mississippi's agriculture industry and the Department's operations.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Businesses, corporations, dealerships, brokers or other commercial enterprises are not allowed to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin.

Advertising rules and guidelines have been established for the Mississippi Market Bulletin in order to comply with regulations enforced by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce and to maintain the objectives of the publication. ## Export Funding and Assistance Available for Mississippi's Food and Agricultural Companies

By Susan Head
Marketing Specialist - MDAC

The Southern United States Trade Association (SUSTA) is now accepting Pre-Qualifications for the 2014 Market Access Program (MAP) Brand Promotion Program and International Marketing Activities. The MAP Brand Promotion program is designed to help small agricultural companies enter export markets with 50 percent reimbursement for promotional costs like advertising, exhibiting at trade shows, and changes to packaging and labels. The International Marketing Program allows small businesses to exhibit at trade shows and missions at a reduced fee while connecting with global businesspeople.

To be eligible for either MAP Brand Promotion or International

Marketing Activities, companies must be considered small according to U.S. Small Business Administration standards, have yearly sales of at least $100,000, and promote a brand-name product that is at least 50 percent U.S. agricultural origin. MAP programs are funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultural Service and administered to southern U.S. companies by SUSTA. Companies located in any of SUSTA's member states can apply for funding: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Puerto Rico, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia. Companies applying for MAP Branded funds can download the Pre-Qualification Form on the SUSTA website at www.susta.org. The Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce invites companies interested in learning more about SUSTA to attend a free seminar on September 17, 2013, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. at the Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum in Jackson, MS. In addition to SUSTA, the Mississippi Development Authority, and U.S. Department of Commerce will also be in attendance to offer assistance regarding international trade. ## Cattle Producers Appreciate Rains

By Linda Breazeale

Rains are taking some feed-cost pressure off Mississippi cattle producers as the end of summer approaches.

Jane Parish, beef specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said summer droughts often reduce hay yields, and the resulting sparse grass in pastures can trigger hay feedings before the first frost hits. This year, rains across most of the state have had the opposite effect and kept grass abundant.

"Whenever we get plenty of rain and pastures are looking good in August, cattle producers are more optimistic," she said. "However, even under promising conditions, prudent financial and production management of cattle herds is still important."

Parish said recent droughts in cattle-producing regions, both east and west of Mississippi, have driven cattle numbers down.

"Cattle numbers as a whole have declined over the past few years in Texas, Georgia, and their surrounding states, but Mississippi's industry has been more stable. Mississippi's bright spot has been stocker cattle, especially when drought areas sent animals here," she said.

"We have not seen as many replacement heifers, meaning there are fewer breeding animals, and the national herd numbers have shown this trend of decline," she said. "This should mean good prices are coming in a few years."

John Michael Riley, Extension agricultural economist, said replacement heifers are not cheap.

"Replacement commercial females are running $1,000 to $2,500 per cow, depending on the quality of the animal," he said.

Riley said Mississippi calves are bringing 5 to 10 cents per pound more than a year ago.

"Lightweight calves (less than 500 pounds) are in the $1.60 per pound range, and heavier (feeder) calves are between $1.30 and $1.35 per pound," he said.

Riley said 2009 was a low mark for cattle markets, but prices generally have trended up since then. The recent market improvements are a result of decreasing supplies.

"We expect supplies to continue to tighten, potentially strengthening futures prices. Prices typically peak in the spring and again in late August and early September, so the situation we are seeing is normal," he said. "Beef demand is looking good and has weathered the struggling economy, but higher feeding costs and market volatility have kept these improvements from trickling back to cattle producers."

Riley said the potential for a record national corn crop should help moderate feed prices.

"Overall, cattle producers are experiencing favorable conditions," he said. "Feed costs are coming down, and animal prices are holding steady with last year, which was an above-average year."

The MS Charity Horse Show began in 1930 and continues today to host Tennessee Walking Horses from all over the world. The 83rd MS Charity Horse Show was held March 28-30, 2013, and raised $45,000 for Blair E. Batson Hospital for Children. Children from the hospital and local area foster homes were invited to ride on horseback each night of the show.
