Timber Revenue, Wildlife Habitat: Can You Have Both?

By Bronson Strickland
Associate Extension Professor,
Wildlife Ecology and Management
Mississippi State University
Extension Service

I was born and raised in the South, so it's hard for me to imagine a world without trees.

Bottomland hardwoods, mixed oak and hickory forests, and pine savannahs are all iconic scenes of Mississippi's wild lands. Trees are not only a beautiful fixture of the Southeastern landscape; they are also very important economically and ecologically. Whether you realize it or not, trees impact our lives in many ways. The houses we live in, the furniture we sit in and sleep on, and the paper products we use every day are all derived from trees.

In fact, the science of forestry was developed to grow, manage and harvest trees on a sustainable basis to satisfy society's needs. It is safe to say that trees play an important financial role and support thousands of jobs and many industries.

Trees also play a very important ecological role, as they create habitat for wildlife. Many birds and mammals use trees for nesting and refuge, while the fruits and nuts produced by trees provide a vital source of food for wildlife throughout the year.

About 20 of Mississippi's 30 million acres are composed of forestland. Of that, about 12.5 million acres are non-industrial, or privately owned. For about 70 percent of the state, managing wildlife habitat means managing trees. It's easy to see that if you are interested in managing a forest for wildlife habitat in Mississippi, you need to understand the basics of forest management.

Clearly, trees are economically important for Mississippi landowners, but what if you are interested in both timber revenue and wildlife on your property? Can you manage a forest to optimize the amount of timber and wildlife habitat at the same time? Well, that's like the old saying about having your cake and eating it too. You can certainly have wildlife habitat when timber revenue is your goal, but much less when compared to timber stands that are managed with wildlife habitat in mind.

With timber and wildlife, you have to prioritize which you want more. The reason you can't have both is essentially due to sunlight. In a forest managed to produce the greatest amount of timber, the goal is to grow as many trees as the site will support. Imagine a crop field fully stocked with corn or soybeans and apply the same concept to trees. Most of the sunlight, water and soil resources are used to grow trees and produce the greatest timber income for the landowner.

On the other hand, if a landowner wanted to improve wildlife habitat for deer, turkey, rabbits or quail, the number of trees would have to be reduced. This is because those wildlife species need herbaceous plants at ground level for food and cover, and these plants require sunlight for growth. The forest manager must reduce the number of trees to create more open space for broadleaf plants and grasses to grow on the forest floor. The wildlife manager can maintain these plants with prescribed burning every two to five years to renew their growth and improve their nutritional quality. The forest and wildlife managers are creating a more open forest with prairie-like conditions on the ground.

But wildlife habitat and timber revenue are not mutually exclusive. That is, you don't have to choose one or the other, but you do have to select a level of each you prefer. It's similar to the see-saw on the playground – when one side goes up, the other goes down. Timber revenue will increase with more trees per acre, but those trees will capture most of the sunlight and soil resources, which will diminish habitat available for wildlife. On the other hand, if you remove most of the trees to create the most wildlife habitat, the revenue generated from timber will be greatly reduced.

Both timber and wildlife are both valuable natural resources for Mississippi. As a landowner, you can have both timber and wildlife, but you can't optimize the value of both at the same time. You have to consider the trade-offs. No decision is wrong; it just depends on what you want. If you are a landowner and are interested in timber revenue and wildlife habitat on your property, you should meet with both a registered forester and a wildlife biologist to customize a management plan that addresses your particular objectives.

A pine stand that has been thinned, treated to remove hardwood competition and burned with controlled fire produces an abundance of herbaceous deer forage.

This pine stand has not been thinned and very little sunlight is reaching the forest floor. As a result, there is little or no deer forage production.

From Our Kitchen To Yours

Delicious Summer Desserts

Blueberry Sugar Cookie Crisp

Filling:

2 pounds super-ripe blueberries
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
Zest of one lemon
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Crust:

3/4 cup (1 1/2 sticks) butter
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 egg
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup cornmeal
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/8 teaspoon salt

In a large bowl, stir together filling ingredients and mash to combine. Cover and let sit for several hours or overnight. Once the fruit mixture sits for a while a good amount of juice will be in the bowl. Strain the juice, and pour it into a saucepan over medium heat. Reduce by half, until it is thick enough to coat a spoon. Cool to room temperature, and gently stir it back in with the berries. It should coat and cling to the fruit.

To prepare the crust, cream together butter and sugars until light and fluffy. Beat in egg and vanilla. In a separate bowl, whisk together flour, cornmeal, baking powder and salt. Slowly stir dry ingredients into butter mixture until evenly combined. Roll into a ball, cover with plastic wrap and let it rest. The crust can be made several days in advance or frozen, however the dough must come to room temperature before rolling it out. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly butter a 9-by-13-inch baking dish, and spoon in the fruit. The filling should be about 1 1/2-inches deep in the pan, so add more berries if necessary. Roll out the crust to 1/2-inch thick in a rectangular shape to cover most of the filling, leaving about 1/2-inch with no crust as a border on all sides. Place the baking dish on top of a large cookie sheet, in case it bubbles over. Bake for about an hour, or until top is nice and brown, not pale, but dark golden and slightly crispy looking. Serve hot with ice cream.

Sorghum Ice Cream

4 cups 2% milk
2 eggs
1/2 cup sorghum syrup
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt

In a medium saucepan, gently whisk together all ingredients over low heat until just bubbly. Set aside to cool. Either freeze in a conventional ice cream freezer, or place in a freezer-safe container and freeze until set, about 8 hours. If using the second method, chip frozen mixture into food processor or blender in chunks. Puree until very creamy but not liquefied. Refreeze until ready to serve.

Caramelized Pear Tarts

1 frozen puff pastry sheet (17 1/4-ounce package), thawed
2 firm-ripe Bosc pears, peeled, halved lengthwise and cored
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1/2 cup chilled heavy cream
1/2 cup caramel sauce
Powdered sugar for dusting, optional

Put a rack in middle position and preheat oven to 425 degrees. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper. Use a floured rolling pin to roll out pastry to a 12-inch square on a lightly floured surface. Brush off excess flour and cut out 4 (5-inch) rounds by tracing around an inverted plate or bowl with tip of a small sharp knife. Prick pastry rounds all over with a fork and transfer to baking sheet. Bake until rounds are puffed and golden, 12 to 15 minutes, and then cool on baking sheet on a rack. While the pastry bakes, toss pear halves in a bowl with the lemon juice. In a separate bowl, beat cream and granulated sugar with a whisk or an electric mixer until it just holds soft peaks. Put each pastry round on a small plate and dust lightly with confectioner's sugar if desired. Spoon some caramel sauce onto center of each round and top with a pear half, cut-side down. Serve with whipped cream on the side.

Strawberry Sheet Cake

2 cups self-rising flour
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 cup canola oil
1 cup milk
1/4 cup sweetened strawberries, mashed
1 small box dry strawberry jello
Strawberry Icing:
1/2 stick butter or margarine, softened
3-4 cups powdered sugar
1/4 cup sweetened strawberries, mashed

Mix all cake ingredients together and pour into a greased 9-by-13 pan. Bake in a 350 degree preheated oven for 25-30 minutes or until a toothpick inserted into the center of the cake comes out clean. While the cake is baking, combine the icing ingredients, and mix thoroughly until smooth; add more powdered sugar or strawberries as needed for spreading consistency. Mix well first, however, before adding extra sugar or strawberries. Cool cake completely before frosting the cake. Store cake in the refrigerator; it is best when chilled for at least 2 hours.

Sweet Summertime

By Lise Foy, Director
MS Agriculture & Forestry Museum

Kenny Chesney's song 'Summertime' is all about this time of the year. My memories of summer growing up on a little farm are full of two bare feet on the dashboard and a Yoo-Hoo bottle on the floorboard. This is time of year to catch fire-flies, make home-made ice cream, go fishing, roll the windows down, go to the swimming hole, or run through the sprinkler. It is the sultry 40 day period referred to as the Dog Days of Summer.

In history, the Dog Days were popularly believed to be an evil time when the sea boiled, the wine turned sour, dogs grew mad, and all other creatures became hysterical and frenzied. The Old Farmer's Almanac lists the traditional period of the Dog Days as beginning July 3 and ending August 11, coinciding with rising of the Dog Star, Sirius.

In 19th and early 20th century Mississippi, people on the farm would be working their gardens in the morning or evening to escape the heat of mid-day. I know my grandmother practiced that schedule. I remember helping her shell peas or butterbeans on the porch under the fan in the afternoon after the morning harvest from the back yard.

There are many ways to enjoy summer. My husband would say a good one would be to go north where there might be some snow. I, however, prefer to relish the heat, sunshine, extra hours of daylight, and being outside. My twins, Katy and Josey, have apparently inherited this love. Two of their most spoken words are 'boots' followed by 'outside'. I think putting the boots on signals that it is okay to go outside and get dirty!

At the Ag Museum, we are open and ready for people to experience a little piece of rural Mississippi summer. Here are five ways to celebrate summer with us:

1. The General Store is stocked with glass bottled coca-colas, ice cream and old-fashioned candy.

2. Visitors are welcome to bring a picnic and some outdoor games like horse shoes or croquet, and spend the afternoon with us.

3. Hike our Nature Trail and enjoy some bird watching.

4. Visit the Victory Garden and learn about growing vegetables and how to feed worms to produce your own compost. Hint: with your own supply of worms, you could be ready to go fishing at a moment's notice.

5. Take a leisurely tour making sure to enjoy a rocking chair on one of our ample porches.

The Ag Museum belongs to the people of Mississippi. It is a 40 acre treasure that captures a moment in history that preserves those sweet summertime memories for many of us who grew up as 'farm kids' or maybe wished they had.

Did you know that you can be a part of the living history experience at the Ag Museum? People are essential to engage visitors. We are looking for volunteers who are willing to share their knowledge, learn a new craft they can demonstrate to our visitors, or engage in crucial behind-the-scenes opportunities. You are invited to help us keep our culture alive for generations to come by serving as a docent, tour guide or interpreter.

As we embark on the journey of rejuvenating the Ag Museum through re-building, restoring, and recruiting volunteers, it is time to say thank you to those who have already contributed through sponsorships, donations or by participating in new events to support our 'Raising the Barn' campaign.

The first Annual Ag & Forestry

Expo followed by a benefit concert held on June 12 was very successful. The Ag Museum Foundation raised over $20,000 through these events. Thanks to our sponsors for being a part of our rebuilding team: Southern AgCredit, iHeart Media, Mississippi Ag, Southern Beverage, Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation, Mississippi Poultry Association, Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries, and Parks, Butler Snow, Mississippi Association of Conservation Districts, Mississippi Beef Council, Cannon Motors, ESCO Corporation, Mississippi Nursery and Landscape Association, Puckett Machinery Company, McGraw Gotta Go, Jackson Free Press, and Mississippi State Extension Service.

We look forward to enjoying a cool drink on the porch with you at the Ag Museum this summer! Come see us!

The November 2014 fire has not stopped the Museum's effort to teach the next generation about the importance of agriculture and the innovations our ancestors developed to feed, clothe, and house themselves. Rebuilding efforts are underway, as well as continuing efforts toward the master plan renovations which began in 2013. If you would like to make a donation to the 'Raising the Barn' campaign, make checks payable to the Mississippi Agriculture Museum Foundation, 1150 Lakeland Drive, Jackson, MS 39216. Call us to learn about volunteer opportunities.

The Ag Museum is located at 1150 Lakeland Drive in Jackson and is open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. In addition to our gallery and exhibit spaces, the Ag Museum also has room for your event, whether it's a meeting, a wedding or other special event. Call (601) 432-4500 for information.

VOLUNTEERS ARE THE HEART AND SOUL OF THE AG MUSEUM.

— AND —

By volunteering, you make history come alive for our visitors. You make special events and programs possible. And, you make a real difference in the lives of others.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Businesses, corporations, dealerships, brokers or other commercial enterprises are not allowed to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin.

Be a Smart Water User During The Summer

By Beth Baker
Research Associate
MSU Department of Wildlife,
Fisheries and Aquaculture

Water-efficient appliances make conservation inside the home convenient, which helps to reduce water consumption. However, outdoor water use can exceed yearly indoor consumption for individual households. Especially in the hot and dry summer months, lawn and garden needs can eclipse indoor water requirements. In fact, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency reports that of the estimated 29 billion gallons of water used daily by U.S. households, more than 30 percent is devoted to outdoor water use.

Unfortunately, with many common watering practices, much of the water applied to lawns and gardens doesn't actually get used by plants. Instead, a fair amount evaporates, runs off lawns into streets or soaks through the soil too quickly to saturate plant rooting areas. This inefficient use is caused by applying too much water or applying it too quickly. Many homeowners may not be reaping the full benefits for their lawns and gardens.

One free and simple tip for more efficiency is to water the yard or garden during cooler times of the day when the potential for evaporation is lower. Don't overwater your lawn or garden. If water is running into the street, it's time to stop. For clay soils, water less deeply and in multiple cycles. Make sure that sprinkler heads are targeting the lawn and not sidewalks, driveways and patios. Repair leaking sprinklers. Don't water your lawn or plants while it's raining or during high winds.

While manual watering is considered more water-use efficient than automated systems, a few simple steps can greatly improve the efficiency of underground lawn sprinklers. Inspect your system before beginning your summer watering routine. This step helps you locate broken pipes and sprinkler heads, which could result in inefficient watering or water being sprayed off target. Some automated lawn sprinkler systems have rain sensors that will prevent the system from watering while it is raining or after heavy rainfall.

Beautiful, eye-catching landscapes that save water and protect the environment are increasing in popularity. This trend is taking hold in many regions of the country, as water-smart landscaping can increase curb appeal and even lead to higher home values. Water-smart landscaping reduces water use, but it can have additional benefits, such as requiring less fertilizer, pesticide and maintenance. This benefit leads to a reduction in water pollution of streams, rivers and lakes.

You can create a water-smart landscape for your home by choosing native or adapted plants, especially those that need less water. Maintaining healthy soils also provides a foundation for using less water, as they cycle nutrients and minimize runoff. Proper fertilization and mowing can contribute to healthy soil. Using mulch around shrubs and garden plants helps to reduce evaporation, inhibit weed growth and prevent erosion. Mulch adds organic matter to your soil as well, which improves its ability to retain water.

In Mississippi, we pride ourselves on our beautiful lawns and gardens, but we can also pride ourselves on using water wisely. Water conservation starts with simple and inexpensive steps. Look for local businesses that can provide native plants and efficient watering supplies, as well as advice on how to use both to get the most benefit. # Summer Heat Can Be Dangerous for Pets

Summers are no laughing matter here in Mississippi, especially for those wearing fur coats.

Dr. Brittany Thames, assistant clinical professor in the Department of Clinical Sciences with the Mississippi State University College of Veterinary Medicine, said dogs and cats are vulnerable to heat, but dogs are more prone to overheating, heat exhaustion and heatstroke.

"Dogs do not sweat to cool off as humans do," she said. "The main way dogs stay cool is by panting. As a general rule, pet owners should use extreme caution and avoid long stays outside when the heat index is over 80 degrees."

Heatstroke happens when the animal is confined in a car or left outside with inadequate shelter. This can also happen when a dog is exercised for too long on a hot humid day. Signs of heatstroke include excessive panting, weakness or collapse, drooling, incoordination, vomiting and sometimes seizures.

"Many people think that parking in the shade, cracking the windows, or running the air conditioner from home to the store will keep their pets safe from the heat," Thames said. "However, studies have shown that none of these efforts impact the rate of temperature increase in the vehicle. Dogs can also burn their paw pads if let in the back of a truck bed with or without crates."

Thames said pets can sunburn just as humans do.

"Giving your dog a lightweight summer haircut can help prevent overheating," she said. "Shave or cut down to one to two-inch length, never to the skin, so that your dog still has some protection from the sun."

Dr. Andrew Mackin, professor and interim head of the Department of Clinical Sciences at the MSU College of Veterinary Medicine, said during the first few warm days of spring, CVM's emergency service sees pets that are suffering from life-threatening heatstroke.

"Each year we find that the first hot and humid days of spring catch pet owners by surprise," he said. "Pet owners need to be aware that in Mississippi, even warm spring days can be dangerous. If owners wait until the really hot summer days before taking precautions to protect their pets from the heat, it may be too late."
