Soybean Acres Forecasted to Exceed Last Year's Totals

By Nathan Gregory
MSU Ag Communications

Mississippi soybean farmers are projected to harvest the most acres in over 25 years despite narrow planting windows and issues getting the crop established.

Trent Irby, soybean specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said planting challenges as a result of wet spring weather hampered early plantings, but the crop has rebounded despite recent hot weather with sporadic rain relief.

"There were areas where excessive rain caused issues with the crop that was planted," Irby said. "Some producers have had to replant two or three times in some cases to get this year's soybean crop established."

Recent estimates from the U.S. Department of Agriculture indicate that the total soybean area planted in Mississippi will reach about 2.35 million acres, up 130,000 acres from last year and 50,000 from March planting projections. Irby said producers are still on pace to reach that number as weather and market conditions swayed some producers into switching some fields from other intended crops to soybean.

"We already expected to have an increase in soybean acres this year," he said. "Some producers were unable to get other crops planted because of rain. Our projections increased 50,000 acres in that time period. This increase likely came from intended corn acres that were unable to be planted during that planting window."

If current market and production trends continue on into harvest, prices will not be as impressive this year compared to recent years. While prices have gone up slightly since last month, trading is down $2 per bushel from this time last year. Greenville cash soybeans are trading for $10.61 a bushel compared to $12.47 a year ago. Recent prices are $10.26 a bushel in Belzoni and $10.36 a bushel in Indianola.

Extension agricultural economist Brian Williams said there are currently just over 625 million bushels of stored soybeans in the U.S., and while soybean prices typically decrease once harvest begins and additional grain floods the market, what the crop looks like compared to expectations will dictate harvest-time prices.

"One thing that we can always expect in Mississippi soybean prices as harvest begins is a weakening of the basis, which is basically the difference between cash prices in Mississippi and futures prices as traded in Chicago," he said. "Demand, on the other hand, is typically unaffected by harvest."

Despite the hot, mostly dry spell since Independence Day, Irby said he the crop continues to progress.

"Producers are doing a good job of staying on top of irrigation and giving the crop what it needs when it needs it," he said. "We have a large number of irrigated acres in the state but also a lot of dry land. The latter will need some timely rains from here on out. Moisture is important anytime you go a significant period when it's this hot outside. Water demand is at its highest during reproductive growth stages."

Irby said nearly the entire soybean crop is planted, but it is in three different stages. Early plantings have nearly finished filling pods and will be approaching maturity in the coming weeks. The middle set of acres is early in reproduction, having just passed flowering and are beginning to set pod. Later plantings are still in vegetative stages and will begin to flower soon.

2 units large eggs
1 1/2 cup unbleached white flour
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup rolled oats
6 ounces semi-sweet chocolate chips

Cream together margarine, soynut butter, cinnamon and nutmeg until light and fluffy. Add Sucanat® gradually and mix. Turn off mixer and scrape down bowl. Drop onto greased cookie sheet with #100 scoop. Bake at 375° F about 10 minutes. Remove and cool.

Soy Nut Clusters

1 tablespoon soybean oil
1 cup soy nuts, roasted and salted
1 cup assorted dried fruit, chopped
1/4 cup brown rice syrup
1/4 cup light brown sugar, packed
1/4 teaspoon salt

Line a 11-by-17-inch pan with foil and grease the foil with the soybean oil. Combine the soy nuts with the dried fruit. Spread them onto the prepared pan in a single layer. Stir the brown rice syrup, brown sugar, and salt in a small saucepan until blended. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat, stirring constantly. Boil until a candy thermometer reaches 270 degrees, about 3-4 minutes. Immediately pour over the soy nuts and fruit. Quickly and carefully stir until coated. While hot, separate into clusters using a spoon. Cool completely before serving.

Linguine with Soybeans and Sausage

8 ounces hot or mild Italian sausages, casings removed
1 onion (8 oz.), peeled and chopped
1 clove garlic, peeled and minced
1 cup fat-skimmed chicken broth
1 package (12 oz.) frozen shelled soybeans or 2 1/4 cups refrigerated cooked shelled soybeans
8 ounces dried linguine
3 tablespoons chopped Italian or regular parsley
3 tablespoons grated parmesan cheese
Salt and pepper

Pull sausages into chunks and put in a 10- to 12-inch frying pan over medium-high heat. Add onion and garlic; cook, stirring often to crumble meat, until sausage is browned, 7 to 10 minutes. Add broth and soybeans and bring to a boil; reduce heat to low and simmer, uncovered, stirring occasionally, until beans are hot, 3 to 5 minutes. Meanwhile, in a 5- to 6-quart pan over high heat, bring about 3 quarts water to a boil. Add linguine and stir occasionally until barely tender to bite, 7 to 9 minutes. Drain pasta and return to pan. Add sausage-soybean mixture to linguine and stir over medium heat until hot. Mix in parsley, parmesan cheese, and salt and pepper to taste. Pour into a serving bowl.

Soybean-Cabbage Casserole

1 large cabbage (about 2 pounds), shredded
3 tablespoons of oil
1 tablespoon of soy sauce or tamari
1/2 teaspoon of sugar
1 teaspoon of salt
2 cups of cooked soybeans, ground
1 tablespoon of whole wheat or unbleached white flour
1 egg dash of pepper
1/2 cup of milk butter or margarine

In a large skillet, sauté the cabbage in the oil until it wilts, then add the soy sauce, sugar and half of the salt. Cook this mixture, covered, for another 15 minutes. While that simmers, combine the soybeans, flour, egg, pepper and remaining salt, then gradually stir in the milk. Alternate layers of cabbage and bean mixture, beginning and ending with the cabbage, in a greased two-quart baking dish. Dot the casserole with butter or margarine, and bake it in a 350-degree oven for about an hour.

Soup and Soil

By Lise Foy, Director

MS Agriculture & Forestry Museum

When you look up the word gumbo, you will find a few different definitions. Gumbo can be used to describe an okra plant or the okra pods themselves. It is a term used to define a certain type of soup or stew which contains okra, seafood, sausage and various spices. Or, it can be used to describe a type of fine-grained silty soil that becomes waxy and very sticky when saturated with water.

I had a summer job in college working in the Mississippi Delta setting up test plots on soybeans and rice. What I remember most vividly from that experience was the standard issue rubber boots purchased for me so I could navigate the gumbo mud. Soybeans and rice grow great in that stuff. Trucks and tractors get really stuck in it. And, it can pull the boots right off your feet!

Have you ever given much thought to the question, 'what is soil?' The academic answer is a complex mixture of minerals, water, air, organic matter and many organisms as well as decaying remains of once-living things. A simpler definition is the 'skin of the earth.'

All life is dependent on soil for sustenance. Plants acquire their nutrients and water from the soil. Animals acquire their nutrients from plants. Soil organisms are critical to transformations of nutrients for food productions. Soil quality determines the natural fertility, water holding capacity which coupled with the climate determines yields.

So then, what is dirt? Dirt is what gets on our clothes or under our fingernails. It is soil that is out of place in our world – whether tracked inside by shoes or on our clothes. Dirt is also soil that has lost the characteristics that give it the ability to support life.

If you visit the Victory Garden, livestock grazing pastures or the Heritage Center Gallery, you will find exhibits that explain the seven general roles that soils play:

1. Soils serve as media for growth of all kinds of plants.

2. Soils modify the atmosphere by emitting and absorbing gases (carbon dioxide, methane, water vapor, and the like) and dust.

3. Soils provide habitat for animals that live in the soil (such as groundhogs and mice) to organisms (such as bacteria and fungi), that account for most of the living things on Earth.

4. Soils absorb, hold, release, alter, and purify most of the water in terrestrial systems.

5. Soils process recycled nutrients, including carbon, so that living things can use them over and over again.

6. Soils serve as engineering media for construction of foundations, roadbeds, dams and buildings, and preserve or destroy artifacts of human endeavors.

7. Soils act as a living filter to clean water before it moves into an aquifer.

There are twelve types of soils in the world. According to the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation Ag Mag for kids on soils, Mississippi has eight of these soil types.

The importance of soil conservation was recognized in the 1930s, as Americans were recovering from the Great Depression. It was during this time that one of the most severe droughts in history crossed the country. A dark fog of dust moved slowly across the entire United States. These great clouds of eroded soil demanded national attention. So much so that in 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote the Governors of all the states recommending legislation to allow local landowners to form soil conservation districts to help prevent the further deterioration of the soil. In 1938, the Mississippi Legislature responded by enacting what became the Soil and Water Conservation Law, creating what is known today as the Mississippi Soil and Water Conservation Commission.

Interestingly enough, soybeans helped to 'heal' the drought-stricken Dust Bowl regions of the country as farmers were able to use the crop to regenerate their soils because of its nitrogen-fixing properties. Soybeans are a $1.17 billion industry for Mississippi today, making the crop the third largest agriculture commodity in the state.

Here's something to try for fun from the United Soybean Board.

Asian Meets Cajun Gumbo

Ingredients

1/2 cup soybean oil
10 1/2 ounces onions, chopped
1 ounce garlic, minced
2 ounces soy flour
2 ounces all-purpose flour
2 gallons vegetable, fish or chicken stock
2 quarts soybeans, cooked and drained*
1 3/4 quart canned cut okra, drained
3 1/2 quarts canned stewed tomatoes
1 1/4 quart green pepper, diced
1 1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground pepper
2 pounds medium shrimp, cooked and peeled
1 1/4 gallon cooked white rice
1/3 tablespoon dried thyme, crushed
1/3 tablespoon cayenne pepper

Heat oil in a heavy, large pot; add onions and garlic and sauté until onions are tender. Mix flours together with 2 cups stock. Gradually stir flour mixture into onion mixture until a smooth thin paste forms. Add soybeans, okra, tomatoes, green pepper, seasonings and remaining stock. Bring mixture to boil; reduce heat and simmer 15 minutes. Add shrimp and simmer 5 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Ladle 12 to 16 ounces over rice. *Cooking method for soybeans: Add 1 pound dry soybeans to 1-1/2 to 2 quarts boiling water; boil 5 minutes. Cover pot, remove from heat and let stand 1 hour. Drain; add 1-1/2 quarts water. Do not add salt at this point or it will delay the softening of the beans. Bring beans and water to boil; reduce heat and simmer, with lid tilted on pot, about 3 hours or until beans are tender.

The November 2014 fire has not stopped the Museum's effort to teach the next generation about the importance of agriculture and the innovations our ancestors developed to feed, clothe, and house themselves. Rebuilding efforts are underway, as well as continuing efforts toward the master plan renovations which began in 2013. # Mississippi Prepares for Avian Influenza

By Linda Breazeale

Mississippi's officials seem sure the state is experiencing the calm before the storm as the poultry industry anticipates the arrival of bird flu later this year.

Tom Tabler, poultry specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said no new reports of highly pathogenic H5N2 avian influenza have occurred in the United States since June 17. Most 2015 outbreaks occurred in Minnesota, Iowa and surrounding states.

"Unfortunately, that area is a nesting ground right now for the migratory waterfowl that will be flying south this winter," he said. "While not typically sickened by the virus, these birds could carry highly pathogenic avian influenza, or HPAI, to our commercial and backyard flocks."

The current strain of bird flu in the U.S. that has been killing turkeys, chickens and raptors has not caused illness in humans.

Dr. John Clifford, deputy administrator of veterinary services in the U.S. Department of Agriculture Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, provided a sobering forecast to the U.S. Senate Committee on Agriculture, Forestry and Nutrition at a public hearing July 7.

"Today, we are facing the largest animal health emergency in this country's history," Clifford testified. "We are dealing with an unprecedented outbreak of highly pathogenic avian influenza that is taking a heavy toll on the poultry industry."

USDA officials are reporting 48 million turkeys and chickens impacted in the first six months of the 2015 outbreak. MSU veterinary and poultry science professors, including Tabler, are working closely with the Mississippi Board of Animal Health to provide educational programs targeting consumers, growers and others connected to the poultry industry.

"The poultry industry is always aware of biosecurity issues, but HPAI will take growers' efforts to the next level -- way beyond normal," Tabler said. "Instead of having shoes, hairnets or other protective clothing designated for one farm, we are recommending a different set for each poultry house on a farm."

Tabler said owners of backyard flocks will need special attention. Signs prohibiting access to poultry areas should be visible for meter readers, delivery services and other visitors.

"Commercial growers have company representatives who will guide them throughout the outbreak, but backyard growers may not understand the nature of this highly pathogenic virus," he said. "It won't take much for this virus to spread and quickly kill all the chickens on a farm. It will also be easy for it to move from a backyard to a nearby commercial flock before anyone can react."

Tabler said in addition to intensive biosecurity measures, backyard flock owners will need to report outbreaks immediately. Symptoms include nasal discharge, swelling of the head, changes in bird behavior, puffy or watery eyes, a decline in water and feed consumption, and a decline in egg production or increase in the number of misshapen eggs.

"Normal daily mortality is nothing to be concerned with and should not be reported as it will only overwhelm officials and slow things down in determining the extent of any potential outbreak," he said.

However, any drastic change in health status or sudden significant increases in mortality should be reported promptly.

"There are no benefits from a delay. Infected birds will die quickly, so reporting a potential outbreak will help us contain the virus and protect neighboring birds and the state's poultry industry," he said

Growers should recognize the difference between low pathogenic bird flu and other illnesses because of the death rates. The highly pathogenic form of bird flu can kill 90-100 percent of a flock within 48 hours.

Dr. Jim Watson, state veterinarian with the Mississippi Board of Animal Health, said sick or dead birds should not be removed from their home farm.

"If growers suspect the highly pathogenic virus, they should call the Board of Animal Health at 1-888-722-3106 for instructions," Watson said. "We will have teams available to conduct depopulations, cleaning and disinfections as needed."

Watson said if or when Mississippi chickens test positive for this virus, quarantines will go into place to help protect the state's $3 billion poultry industry.

"Strict biosecurity practices are our best first line of defense," Watson said. "We are all in this together."

Mississippi Blueberries Going Global

Mississippi Blueberries: Non-Existent to Global

50 years ago, Mississippi was recovering from the devastation of back-to-back tropical storms Hilda and Betsy, and a blueberry industry in the state was virtually unheard of. That is, until the introduction of several new varieties of the southern highbush. Southern highbush cultivars along with the historically predominant rabbiteye cultivars, were specifically bred to be grown in warmer areas of the United States, making it possible for blueberries to become a sustainable and viable crop in Mississippi.

As the Mississippi's blueberry industry and its marketing system developed, an increasing amount of growers entered the business. This, in addition to growth in consumer demand over the years, led to a significant climb in blueberry acreage in Mississippi from around 80 acres in 1981 to 2,100 acres in 2014.

Today, Mississippi blueberries are even going global. For the first time this past June, the Miss-Lou Blueberry Growers Cooperative, which includes farms in Poplarville, Purvis and Lumberton, exported their produce to India and the United Arab Emirates. All told, members shipped around 9,000 pounds of berries.

Luis Monterde oversaw the selection and packing of the product from his facility in Lumberton. From there, the berries were taken to Gulfport for inspection and treatment at Gateway America, before being transported to Houston, Texas, where they were loaded onto planes and flown overseas.

The idea was conceived in January when Dinesh Shinde, owner of Anusaya Fresh Worldwide in Mumbai, India, visited Miss-Lou farms and selected their blueberries for the first USA Blueberry Blast Celebration in India and Dubai. Anusaya Fresh will distribute the product throughout the two countries.

Tim Goggans, president of Miss-Lou Blueberry Growers Cooperative and owner-operator of Sandy Run Farm in Purvis, indicated that this is the first of many exports to India, the Middle East and Asia. He said that Miss-Lou members will harvest about two million pounds of blueberries this year, with about 25 percent of them set for export.

Foreign buyers are increasingly interested in Mississippi blueberries due to their high quality, sweet taste and health benefits. Last year alone, Mr. Goggans hosted buyers from Korea, India and Central America.

He said, "If our blues can survive hurricanes, drought and our humidity and still be sweet and tasty, along with being healthy, why not tell the world about them?"

HARVEST PERMITS

As we enter the harvest season for many different crops, the Mississippi Department of Transportation (MDOT) reminds everyone to have their Harvest Permits for hauling agricultural products.

Harvest Permits entitle a vehicle to haul sand, gravel, fill dirt, agricultural products, or unprocessed forestry products at an authorized maximum gross weight NOT to exceed 84,000 pounds.

The permits are not valid on Interstate Highways or low weight roads. Any vehicle weighed in excess of 80,000 pounds on an Interstate Highway will be penalized $0.05 per pound for all weight in excess of 80,000 and $0.15 per pound for all weight in excess of 100,000 pounds. The cost for a Harvest Permit is $25.
