Ag Industry Holds Steady Despite Lower Row Crop Values

By Nathan Gregory
MSU Extension Service

Agriculture was a $7.7 billion industry in Mississippi last year, exceeding the total set in 2017 despite declines in the estimated value of row crops, timber, catfish and livestock.

The state's largest agricultural commodity, poultry, is responsible for pushing the overall value above $7.5 billion for the second straight year, bringing in nearly $3 billion by itself.

"The strong poultry numbers made up for some lower production values in other commodities," said Josh Maples, an agricultural economist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service. "Poultry prices have been lower in recent months, but prices during the first half of 2018 were much higher than during the first half of 2017, and egg prices have been significantly higher than 2017.

"In total, poultry value is up 8 percent, or $230 million. That more than offsets the decreases in other commodities," he said.

Forestry was a $1.25 billion industry, a 3 percent dip from 2017 values.

"Across the board, all timber products are doing better in south Mississippi than in north Mississippi due to more mills and competition," said John Auel, assistant Extension professor of forestry at MSU. "The economy is doing well, but other factors are keeping housing starts down. Millennials are not buying houses like previous generations did."

Included in the overall $7.7 billion total is an estimated $352 million in government payments -- the largest amount of federal assistance Mississippi producers have seen since 2009. These payments include protection against price and revenue declines.

One type of the assistance was for growers affected by a trade standoff between the U.S. and China. This summer, China enacted tariffs on a long list of U.S. goods, including soybeans, corn, cotton, rice and wheat, in response to the U.S. ordering tariffs on imports from China.

"This trade war is not about agriculture. It's about patent protection and trade of other goods," said Keith Coble, professor and head of the MSU Department of Agricultural Economics. "Any country in trade negotiations knows that when you get hit, you have to hit back where you can hurt the other country the worst. In our case, we send a lot of ag products to China, and they knew hitting us there would put the greatest pressure on us."

The gap between the values of soybeans and cotton, the state's third and fourth largest agricultural commodities, closed by more than $138 million last year. Soybean values fell more than 5 percent from $1.12 billion in 2017 to $1.05 billion despite growers planting 10,000 more acres of the crop. One major factor in the lower prices was the Chinese tariffs.

Cotton, meanwhile, rose 14 percent to $623 million from $548 million in 2017.

The only other row crop that saw a value increase was rice, which jumped almost 13 percent to $117 million, compared with $104 million in 2017. Rice finished ninth out of 16 commodities.

"We've just got lower commodity prices almost across the board. Producer margins are really tight in all of agriculture," Maples said. "Typically, you have some options. If corn and soybeans aren't doing well, you might jump to cotton. Producers have done some of that, but it's not as if cotton prices are really high. They're just not as low as corn and soybeans have been."

Corn rounded out the top five, with a $351 million production value, up 4 percent.

The livestock industry was worth $422 million last year, a 1.3 percent decrease. With an estimated value of $305 million, beef cattle are up 7 percent and finished sixth, while milk production was down 11.4 percent at $22.9 million and finished 13th. Hogs finished one spot ahead of milk production with $94.3 million, a 19.7 percent dip from 2017.

"We've got large supplies of every livestock and poultry product,"

Maples said. "We're having to work through those supplies, and we'll have the largest amount of pork, poultry and beef production we've ever seen in 2019 once you put them all together."

Catfish finished seventh with a value of just over $164 million, a decrease of more than 9 percent from nearly $181 million in 2017.

Finishing eighth, sweet potato production had a value of nearly $118 million, a decrease of less than 1 percent from 2017. Specialty crops held steady at No. 11 with $104 million.

Peanuts, wheat and grain sorghum rounded out the last three spots. Peanuts were valued at $18.7 million, wheat at $12.1 million and grain sorghum at $1.3 million.

From Our Kitchen To Yours

Hot Flaky Biscuits on a Cold Winter's Day

Honey Butter Biscuits

4 cups all-purpose flour (unbleached)
2 sticks butter (cold, salted and cubed)
2 teaspoons salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons honey
1 2/3 cups buttermilk
4 tablespoons butter (melted)

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Combine all dry ingredients and cold butter in food processor, pulse until it forms large crumbs. If you do not have a food processor, use a pastry blender, or use two knives, cutting through the mixture until it forms smaller crumbs. Add buttermilk and honey into the food processor, gently combine until mixed. Turn the dough out onto a clean, floured surface. Roll dough into a dense sheet, about 1/2-inch thick. Cut using a biscuit cutter and place into a buttered cast iron skillet, or on an ungreased cookie sheet. Brush the tops of the biscuits with some of the melted butter. Bake for 15 minutes, or until golden brown. Brush with more melted butter before serving.

Cream Cheese and Chive Biscuits

2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons sugar, optional
1 teaspoon salt
4 to 5 tablespoons fresh snipped chives
5 tablespoons cold butter
4 ounces cold cream cheese
1 cup buttermilk
1 tablespoon melted butter

Preheat oven to 425 degrees F. Line a baking sheet with a silicone mat or parchment paper. In a large mixing bowl, combine the flour, baking powder, soda, sugar, and salt. Whisk to blend thoroughly. Cut the butter and cream cheese into small pieces and add to the dry mixture. Work in with a pastry blender and/or fingers until the mixture resembles coarse meal. This can also be done in a food processor, but pulse just until the mixture resembles coarse meal. Stir in the chives and then add the buttermilk. Stir the dough with a fork just until the dry ingredients have moistened; turn the mixture out onto a floured surface. Knead the mixture four or five times, or just until the dough holds together and forms a smooth, soft dough. Don't overwork the dough or the biscuits will be tough. Work in a little more flour, if necessary. Pat the dough or roll it into a circle about 3/4 inch thick. Cut round or square shapes out with a biscuit cutter and arrange the biscuits on the prepared baking sheet. Gently bring the scraps together and continue cutting out biscuits. Brush each biscuit with melted butter. Bake the biscuits for 12 to 16 minutes, or until the tops are lightly browned.

Sausage Cheddar Biscuits

4 cups all-purpose flour (unbleached)
2 sticks butter (cold, unsalted and cubed)
3 teaspoons salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 2/3 cups buttermilk
1 pound of breakfast sausage (thoroughly cooked)
1 cup cheddar cheese (shredded)
2 tablespoons butter (melted to brush on the biscuits)

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Combine flour, salt and baking powder and cold butter in food processor, pulse until it forms fine crumbs. If you don't have a food processor use a pastry blender or two forks. Be careful not to over mix or to use your hands. You want the little chunks of butter to stay intact and not melt from the heat of your hands. Add buttermilk to mixture as you pulse or mix. Place the dough into a clean bowl. Cut in the shredded cheddar and cooled, cooked sausage until completely incorporated. Separate the dough into 12 balls. Form quickly and gently with your hands so that it is rounded. Place the balls of dough snugly into a 9 x 13-inch casserole dish. Brush the tops of each biscuit with melted butter, if you desire. Place the casserole dish in the oven and bake for about 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown and cooked all the way through. Serve immediately or allow to cool and cover in aluminum foil and then freeze.

Cranberry Walnut Biscuits

1 cup fresh cranberries, coarsely chopped or sliced
3/4 cup fresh walnuts or pecans, coarsely chopped
2 1/2 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons cold butter (cut into small pieces)
3/4 cup buttermilk (plus a little more, if needed)

Line a large baking sheet with parchment paper. Preheat the oven to 425 degrees F. Combine the cranberries, walnuts, and sugar in a bowl. Toss to coat. In a separate bowl or food processor with metal blade, combine the flour, baking powder, soda and salt. Whisk or pulse mixture to blend. Add the butter pieces and cut in with a pastry blender, fingers, or six to eight pulses of the food processor. The mixture should look like coarse meal. If using a food processor, move the mixture to a large bowl after it has been combined. Add the cranberry and walnut mixture and toss to blend. Add the buttermilk and mix well with a fork or hands until the mixture begins to clump together. Move the dough to a floured surface and knead gently three to five times, just enough to get the mixture to form a soft dough. If too dry, moisten hands with a little more buttermilk. Pat the dough out into a circle about 1/2 to 3/4 inch in thickness. Cut out with biscuit cutters. Place biscuits on the prepared cookie sheet and bake for 12 to 15 minutes, or until lightly browned.

ricultural marketing on the second day. Topics will include implementing mobile commerce, the importance of an online presence, using social media platforms to promote products, cyber security and safety, and creating and maintaining a business website.

Advertising Guidelines

The Mississippi Market Bulletin is published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The Mississippi Market Bulletin is an important way for the Department to disseminate news and information about issues affecting Mississippi's agriculture industry and the Department's operations.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Businesses, corporations, dealerships, brokers or other commercial enterprises are not allowed to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin.

Advertisers are cautioned that it is against the law to misrepresent any product offered for sale in public notices or advertisements carried in any publication that is delivered by the United States Postal Service.

- In order to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin you must be a subscriber. To place an ad, you must include your name, mailing address and account number that the subscription is listed under on each ad that you submit (this information will not be printed). Each subscriber is allowed to advertise two ads in the Bulletin, listing one ad per category.
- All listings must be agriculture related (raised, grown, produced or operated on your farm). At the top of your ad, write the category that the ad should be listed under. We reserve the right to edit, revise or reject each ad. Please print or type your ad.
- There is a 30-word limit for classified advertisements, this includes: price (on the item you are selling), your city, county and telephone number or name and complete address must be included in the ad if you do not list a telephone number. Poultry Sees High Demand for Eggs, Larger Production

By Susan Collins-Smith
MSU Extension Service

Poultry producers got off to a robust start in 2018, which helped the industry end the year strong.

Poultry remains Mississippi's giant among the state's agricultural commodities, topping the state's value of production list for the 24th consecutive year with an estimated total production value of $3 billion. That figure is up 8.3 percent from 2017. Final production figures will be available in April.

"Poultry prices have been lower in recent months, but prices in the first half of 2018 were higher than during the first half of 2017. We are also expecting slightly larger Mississippi production totals in 2018," said Josh Maples, an agricultural economist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service.

Three industry segments make up the overall value of poultry: broilers, eggs and chickens. Broilers are worth an estimated $2.7 billion, increasing 5.4 percent from 2017. Consumer demand for eggs pushed their value up 44 percent from the previous year to $304 million. Estimated value for chickens that produce table eggs stands at about $8 million, a 10.5 percent increase over 2017.

"Demand for eggs has been strong in 2018, even with the price increase from 2017," Maples said. "U.S. egg production and consumption are higher in 2018 than they were in 2017."

A large supply of meat on the market has narrowed profit margins for poultry, beef and pork in the second half of 2018. Poultry production is larger without an equal increase in demand, which has pressured poultry prices in recent months, Maples said.

Although poultry saw some stiff competition from beef and pork at the grocery in 2018, chicken remains an economical protein choice for consumers, according to Tom Tabler, Extension poultry specialist.

poultry," he said. "Beef and pork, which are chicken's two biggest protein competitors, are favorably priced, but chicken is still less expensive for consumers."

While feed prices were higher in 2018, an excellent grain harvest for row crop producers across the country should keep feed costs under control in 2019. Producers spend 70 percent of input costs on feed grains, which consist mostly of soybeans and corn.

"U.S. soybean farmers likely harvested a record number of soybeans in 2018," Tabler said. "Corn producers are expected to have near record yields, surpassed only by the 2016 harvest."

Disease was a nonissue this year, but producers are always on guard and implement several disease management measures, including biosecurity practices and routine surveillance and regulatory testing, to help protect the state's flocks.

"It is impossible to know at this point if avian influenza may make a comeback," Tabler said. "There are numerous cases overseas, but we will have to see what happens here as ducks and geese start to move."

Weather is a concern for the industry during any year because one crop failure could drastically increase producers' costs. But the tariff situation brings added uncertainty to 2019.

"Prices for lumber and steel used to build new chicken houses have skyrocketed," Tabler said. "A new broiler house that cost $250,000 to build in 2017 now is closer to $350,000. Higher tariffs are also making it more difficult for producers to export numerous agricultural products, including meat and grains."

Even though the tariff situation is an added concern, the industry always experiences a natural series of ups and downs, Tabler said.

"The poultry industry tends to run in cycles. It's good for a while, and then it's not so good for a while. I expect perhaps some slowdown this year, but that's not unusual. That's just business as usual," he said.

One challenge the industry faces going forward is antibiotic-free poultry production.

"There are several challenges associated with this type of production, not the least of which is how to recover the additional costs to produce it," Tabler said. "Even though consumers want chicken produced without antibiotics, they are often unwilling to pay the additional costs to produce it."

Forestry Gains Lost Ground While Holding No. 2 Ag Spot

Forestry has been a billion-dollar heavyweight in the state's economy for the last six years, and the 2018 estimated value of $1.25 billion came despite a sluggish market.

John Auel, a Mississippi State University Extension Service assistant professor of forestry, said final figures will not be available until January, but indications are that the industry is on par with its 2017 value to the state. Forestry remains the state's No. 2 agricultural commodity, just behind poultry.

"We base our estimates of the value of forestry on severance tax collections, and as of the end of November 2018, we are actually ahead by about $200,000 in collections," Auel said. "That means we seem to be on track or higher than the previous year."

Mississippi's timber industry has been making a slow recovery since the 2007-2009 recession. Forestry's value to the state is up more than 40 percent from the recent low in 2009.

Auel said housing starts have stagnated in recent years, and sawtimber prices closely reflect the rate of new home building. Pine sawtimber typically contributes 60 percent to the overall forestry value.

"A good housing starts rate is 1.5 million a year, but several factors have left the U.S. stuck at about 1.2 million units for the last few years," he said. "Housing starts should get back to this level by 2022, but it's going to take an extended time rather than a rapid increase like we expected."

Because of recent slower demand, Mississippi landowners have a lot of sawtimber still growing that is ready for harvest.

"In some areas, we've got 10 to 20 years of sawtimber standing on the ground, and if many more years pass, that timber is going to get too big for the mills to process," Auel said. "This excess supply has a downward effect on price."

Pine sawtimber prices averaged $22 a ton in Mississippi in 2018. Pine pulpwood is a much lower-value timber product; this year, it had an average price of $5 per ton.

"Mississippi pulpwood markets are more limited north of Interstate 20 than they are in the southern part of the state," Auel said. "Demand is low right now."

Previously, two large pulpwood mills drew from the north Mississippi market, but the one in Alabama closed. The closure decreased demand in this timber-rich area, and now there is excess supply.

However, the long-term outlook for forestry is positive. Lara Bowman, economic development director with the Enterprise of Mississippi, represents interests in Choctaw and Webster counties.

"The east-central area of the state is called the wood basket of Mississippi. We have more available timber to harvest than anywhere else in the state," Bowman said. "Two existing lumber mills within 90 miles of this area are both planning significant expansions. This will modernize equipment and expand the mills' operation and production capacity, in addition to hiring more employees."

These expansions will take time but will increase demand for timber in the northern part of the state.

"This won't be an immediate answer to the timber woes, but the outlook is better in our area as far as demand," she said.
